TELLING THE TRUTH IN AN INTERESTING MANNER.

There is nothing so discouraging as to read a great deal of wonderful material about something you are going to buy and then find out with keen disappointment that what you purchased was just about 40 per cent shy.

People want to know all about what they intend to purchase and they expect it to be built upon truth.

The success of some of America's greatest business establishments has been based upon the value of underestimating rather than overestimating what they have to sell. So when the country storekeeper, Deacon Smith, gets up in prayer meeting and says loud enough for the congregation to hear, "Oh Lord, what a miserable sinner I am," no one gets excited.

They know that the Deacon does not mean it but is using the technical language of the prayer meeting.

But suppose the old Deacon yelled out loud enough so that all could hear, "Oh Lord, I have been giving short weight in my store," or "I have been flirting with the milliner," every man and woman in the church would listen with bated breath.

Now, if you have any clever hunches or suggestions to claim that the Annual this year will be radically different, but all the claims we make will be underestimated, as we know that the final test is the acid test. When you examine this book you are going to say, "The Management Told the Truth."

Of course there are going to be a number of interesting humorous features in the joke section that will be almost as exciting as what Deacon Smith could say if he would. To tell them here would spoil a good thing. Wait until the book is out.

Now, if you have any clever hunches or suggestions or snappy pictures or kolaks that would make most interesting material, be sure and send them in, or better still, bring them in yourself. The 1921 Cornhusker will welcome you with outstretched arms.

CHRISTMAS SEAL DRIVE.

The Nebraska Tuberculosis Association will soon begin its annual campaign to sell Christmas seals. Fifty thousand dollars has been named as the minimum fund to be raised; if all the seals are sold they will bring $100,000.

Individuals and organizations desiring to help sell Christmas seals should get in touch at once with headquarters or with local organizations working in the campaign. There is much territory unorganized for the campaign. What about your home town? Why not learn the details of the campaign at once? Then when you go home for Thanksgiving, if your locality is not organized, interest some of the public-spirited citizens in the Christmas seal drive.

THE PRESS CLUB

The Press Club will be organized tonight. This is a distinct step toward a better group of journalists at the University. Colleges in the east have formed these clubs and from the membership of these societies are picked the most able men and women for the college publications. Besides, a club with an enrollment as large as will probably be had at Nebraska there is no reason that the University should not be kept before the eyes of the entire state through news sent to their homes by the various members. The men and women of the pen will be brought together by such an organization in a way that no other organization on the campus is able to accomplish. Like ideals of journalism will be developed. Better work in the field of writing will result. A strong centralization of the school writers will result.

It will enable all the men and women of the University who are interested in this branch of work to get together, to understand the needs of the University in the writing field and to bring out the latent powers of heretofore unknowns in the journalistic side of school. The club is being organized by Sigma Delta Chi, men's honorary journalistic society, in co-operation with Theta Sigma Phi, women's honorary journalistic society. The move is approved by a number of prominent Lincoln newspapermen and University authorities. The club is open to all students interested in journalism and these are invited to attend the meeting tonight.

MISTAKES.

If three little schools stood in a row, With never a fence between;

If each little school had three little boys

At work in an English course.

And each little boy had three mistakes,

Three times, three times, three;

And each mistake caused there more mistakes,

How many mistakes would there be?

And each little boy had three little friends,

With whom he played every day;

And each little friend made three mistakes,

In his vocabulary every day.

And friends, mistakes, and boys

All went out to tea,

And all of them made a grammatical mistake,

How many mistakes would there be?

Blaze Routs Members From Beds Monday at Bushnell Guild House

These were the words that carried to the ears of some twenty-five sound sleepers in the Bushnell Guild chapter house, 1701 L street, about 6 o'clock Monday morning when two Freshmen, who had been sleeping on the third floor, discovered a small blaze on the fraternity house roof.

These words were far more effective as a summons to drag weary students from their bunks than the loudest of cow bells, or the shrillest of "Big Bens." They were the means of bringing the sleepers "down to earth" and to the realization that the fire was not merely a dream.

Several trips to the faucet sufficed to put out the blaze; but not until a good-sized hole was burned in the roof and the temperature of the house proportionately lowered.

"Better Call Fire Department." "Better call the fire department," somebody had suggested soon after the flames were discovered. But when the apparatus arrived on the scene only the hole in the roof was proof that a fire had visited the house.

After the fire had been put out and the small amount of damage figured up, the weary members of the fraternity again returned to their beds and slept until the alarm clock said that it would take a hurry-up call to make an "eight o'clock" on time.

This is the first of fraternally "house-warmings" this school year. Alpha Omicron Pi was hostess to three "warmings" last year, Sigma Chi to one, and Pi Beta Phi entertained with a similar get-together in 1918.

PICTURE OF YALE-PRINCETON GAME SENT BY TELEGRAPH

NEW YORK.—The New York World last night announced the successful transmission of four photographs by wire between its office here and the office of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Two photographs, one of the Yale-Princeton football game and the other an airplane view of New York City, were sent from New York to St. Louis and a picture of an Indian chief and one of a Mississippi river steamboat, were sent from St. Louis to the World office. The total time of transmission for one picture was eight minutes.

WOMEN'S MENDING SHOP OPENED.

Dyeing, Darning, Small Sewing Done at Cost.

A novel feature of the new hotel for women, which opened in Philadelphia in October, is a mending and sewing shop where all the little odd jobs necessary to keeping a business woman's wardrobe in order are done at cost. Sewing on fresh collars and cuffs, replacing buttons and hooks, dyeing chiffon waists, darning stockings and doing the many little things that business women haven't time for is taken care of by the shop directors who are members of a volunteer committee. Incidentally this service will give part-time work to many women who want some work to do but cannot give eight hours a day.

Spicing this was your b. p. and she had just taken your pink burlap muffler out of her Christmas stocking! Disappointed?—well I should say, but how could you know that she had set her heart upon a pair of barbed wire sidecombs from you—that is how could you know unless you had consulted GIFT GRANNY. She's the dear old lady whose quaint little house is on our balcony. She'll find out what any of your friends want for Christmas, so come up and meet her secretary, won't you?
