THE FRIENDSHIP OF OUR LEADING FINANCIERS.

Do you sometimes yearn for the friendship of Rockefeller, Morgan, Gary, Schwab, Rothschild or some of the other big guns of finance so that you could get a "straight tip" from them occasionally, that would soon put you on Easy street?

Great financiers do not give tips, but they often give advice in the financial magazines and papers. And no other than Baron Rothschild, head of the great banking firm bearing his name, states "that the great financiers mean what they say and that the public have no reason to be skeptical of their advice." The principles laid down by our great financiers are often overlooked, because they are so simple.

"Never try to buy at the bottom nor sell at the top," is one of the principles upon which the bulk of the independent fortunes have been built. This principle, of course, means also the ability to buy or sell well in advance of developments. For example, when the French revolution was settled, or approaching a settlement, the Rothschilds invested heavily in British consols then selling at absurd levels. At this time John Bull was deeply involved in the French monarchical revolts and things looked mighty blue for England and her bonds. But nevertheless, the Rothschilds bought the bonds in anticipation. They bought on a rising market, and not at the bottom. They were wise enough not to wait for the top, but sold their holdings somewhere near the top. They wanted relative safety and a handsome profit, and they got it.

The financiers have time and again laid down the principle of the "square deal." That it pays in the long run to play the game of business on the square whether you are financing a great enterprise or a single country store.

These principles are inside tips from the world's greatest financiers. Read the financial papers and magazines such as the Magazine of Wall Street, American Banker, etc., and you will not need the personal friendship of Rockefeller, Morgan, Gary or Schwab to appropriate their advice for your own financial welfare.

AWGWAN AGAIN.

Today Awgwan makes its third appearance for the year. This issue is one of the most clever "set-ups" of the season. The cover is unique, the editorials are pointed and the jokes are exceptionally good. "Hobb" Turner, acting art editor, is responsible for the neat work of the cartoons and they are all commendable. "Ignatz" has another spicy, slangy, foolish story of his unending line of lives of great men featuring for this month the unknown and unheard of "Pizzazo." A number of poems are also in this issue of Nebraska's popular comic sheet. Last month letters were received from leading film corporations stating that they were clipping Awgwan jokes for their weekly film jokes. Students who have attended the movies lately were given the pleasure of seeing brief bits of Awgwan humor thrown on the local screens. Awgwan is nationally popular and deserves not only student support but student appreciation. Get a copy from the local newsstand if you are not a subscriber. It will persuade you that you should join the great number of subscribers who are already perusing their copy of the magazine.

KEEPING UP WITH TIME.

There is a prevailing tendency on the part of many college students everywhere to live too much in the environment of their immediate surroundings, paying strict attention to those things that have a striking effect on their daily life and "let the rest of the world go by."

This opening paragraph perhaps means little in itself and is no doubt confusing because of the humble effort of the writer to make himself clear, but it is intended to lead off in a way a plea directed toward the men and women of Ohio State for a closer and more regular consideration of the current events of the age. Go to any instructor who has had an opportunity at one time or another of quizzing his students on current topics, ask him how well prepared they are on timely subjects and his answer will in most instances be: College students are sadly lacking in this respect. One does not even have to call on the "prof." for an answer. Pick out a half a dozen students at random and after a few minutes questioning you will find that the average will be poor and that on a whole their knowledge of timely topics is pathetic. This does not hold true in all cases, but laying aside specific examples, one finds the original verdict to be true. All of us upon examination are more or less living examples of this state of affairs.

It is a regrettable state of affairs to be sure, and one which should be remedied. The boy in the streets as a rule can give you a fairly detailed account of the big news of the day. The world is his classroom and the happenings of the day are his text books. He gets it by reading a week-old newspaper rescued from the depths of a rubbish barrel—but be that as it may he gets the news and devours it with delight.

The busy merchant glances over the top of his coffee cup at the morning paper and during the sweeping and dusting period, the bustling housewife recesses for a few minutes to hurriedly peruse the discarded paper. Surely the college student is not too busy to indulge in such practices if these energetic persons of the world find them highly important. There is a general, boiled-down collection of information in the daily paper which is found in no other publication.

Here is the remedy. Don't fail to purchase a newspaper every day no matter how busy you expect to be or how slim your chances are for reading its contents. It may be that you will have a minute to spare which can be used to a splendid advantage in perusing the front page at any rate. There is not one student who can't find five or ten minutes every day which can be expended in this fashion. By making this a daily habit, the average person will soon find his store of knowledge increased and his education more complete in every way. The college man and woman must keep abreast with the times if he or she expects to be a success in life.—Ohio State Lantern.

VESPERS

Mr. C. H. Rogers of the Midland Savings Bank, formerly minister of the Plymouth Congregational Church, will give a talk on "Thanksgiving" at Vespers, Tuesday, November 23.

Madeline Hendricks will lead the meeting. There will be special music.

UNIVERSITY MIXER
THANKSGIVING PARTY

Seven Hundred Nebraska Students Attend "Turkey Day" Celebration Saturday Evening.

With a big turkey looking down on more than seven hundred students, reminding them of Thanksgiving vacation, the Armory took on a "Turkey Day" aspect at the third all-University mixer Saturday night, November 26.

The floor was crowded all evening with students and alumni. The Michigan Aggie team and former Huskers were guests of honor. The party included all the regular features of a mixer and many surprises as well, according to those who attended.

Thanksgiving Decorations.

A large turkey at one end of the room reminded students of the "Turkey Day" holiday which begins Wednesday noon, November 24, and ends Saturday noon, November 27. The main room of the Armory was decorated with streamers of scarlet and cream.

"Hungry" Anderson who, with his "Blue Devil" orchestra, played at last year's mixers, furnished the music Saturday night. A program of Thanksgiving surprises was another of the evening's features. Ice cream and wafers were served.

Ample provision was made for the checking of coats and hats.

Those present were divided as to their colleges. The Laws and the Engineers both gave skits.

Chaperons were Dean and Mrs. P. M. Buck, Prof. and Mrs. John P. Senning and Dean Amanda Heppner.

LAW CLUB MEETINGS
PROVE VERY POPULAR

Roscoe Pound and Hastings Organizations Hold Weekly Get-Togethers Thursday Evening.

The Roscoe Pound and Hastings law clubs held their weekly meetings Thursday evening. The progress of all four of the law clubs is remarkably rapid considering that it has been but a few weeks since they were originated. They expect to be active in debate and discussion during the year. Also plans are well under way for smokers and feasts. All members are enthusiastic over their work and a strong competition between the clubs has been developed. The Hastings Club was presented with a set of facts for a trial case. The action of the case was for breach of contract. Oscar Drake was presiding judge and the witnesses took the oath under him. The attorneys for the defendant were McDonald and Finkelstein. The attorneys for the plaintiff were Strimple and Rose. The judge rendered a decision in favor of the defendant. Professor Robbins, faculty advisor, presented them with several valuable law points. He announced his intentions of looking up a set of facts and putting a real case before the club.

The Roscoe Pound Club held its first trial case Thursday evening. The case was brought before the court for breach of contract. The attorneys for the plaintiff were Butler, Luby, Stanton and Atkins. Stryker, Samuelson, Richards and Kinsey pleaded for the defendant. G. G. Foster presided as judge. A decision was rendered in favor of the defendant. The meeting was successful and some very promising material was revealed during the trial case discussion. The next case before the club will be based on torts. The membership committee announced that plans for a dinner and a smoker are well under way.

Class of 1923 Plans Mixer December Fourth

The Class of 1923 is already at work planning its first mixer of the school year which will be staged in the Armory December 4. Stunts, dancing and a varied program will be prepared by the committees in charge.

A six-piece orchestra has been engaged to furnish music the entire evening. Refreshments will be served. Detailed announcements will be made shortly after Thanksgiving vacation.
