In this way the subscriber receives the benefit of more papers and the order for the number of copies can be given to the printers at an earlier date.

"There are about four thousand students on the two Lincoln campuses this year", said the new business manager Monday, "so that the 2,000 subscription mark should be reached with ease." The new feature of receiving the news while it is still "hot from the press" will appeal to many of the students who have sometimes had to wait until late in the morning of account of classes to receive the announcements for the day, he concluded.

Many of the eastern college papers which give the service which will be given by the Nebraskan this semester not only give the college news but act as the regular daily paper, as there are no others published in the town. Some even go farther and include in the college course instruction in the setting of type and have the paper published in college press room. The fairness of the distribution will be seen more and more as the new system is carried out, is the promise of the managers.

PROF. KILBORN WRITES ON CREDIT QUESTION

Prof. Russell D. Kilborn, of the Department of Economics of the University, contributed an article called "When Prices Are Falling" to the current issue of "The Credit Monthly." This magazine devotes itself to business fundamentals with which credit men of this country are concerned.

The fact that credit men must study local as well as national conditions is brought out by Professor Kilborn through two illustrations common today. The first, where a cut of prices occurs after a retailer has stocked up with a line of shoes, brings out the fact that the public will await a price drop before purchasing the commodity if they know that it must come sooner or later. The second idea presented in the article is just the reverse, that is, of a different nature. It deals with the drop in prices of crops, resulting in a lowered purchasing of the farming element.
