EX-SERVICE MEN AND DRILL.

After battling your way through the lines at Verdun, after going over the top time after time ready to meet death at the hands of the champions of butchery, after fighting in the midst of that memorable Belleau Wood—would you like to return to college only to be compelled to drill four times a week with a squad of R. O. T. C. rookies, any of whom you could give a bit of intensive military training yourselves?

The protests of ex-service men who are compelled to drill at the University are justified. Their point of view is not only natural but sane. They have been "through the mill," so to speak, and have been subjected to the "real thing" for a year—two years and some of them even longer than that. Why should they be made to return to school and do "squads right" with their younger brothers who were just putting on long trousers when they were putting on khaki? It seems illogical—to say the least.

It might be that since more than three hundred cadets have failed to qualify on the new gallery range they will be the "target" for many jabs that will be "shot" at them.

The Farmers' Fair and its crowd of hilarious merry-makers puts one in mind of the county fairs of days gone by. There was even pink lemonade—the real article.

Our dormitory sisters need calling down. In fact it is a very serious matter. It is reported that during the expulsion of extraneous matter from the upper windows, one luckless passer-by received an untimely shower bath, and still another a shower of lemon rinds much to the mortification of the dormitory inhabitants. It is said that anything if repeated often enough, even twice, becomes a joke; but a joke repeated often becomes either stale or an offense in some form or other. Be careful, girls!!!!

THANK YOU, OMAHA.

Nebraska's metropolis—the Gate City of the West—has entertained students from the University of Nebraska in a lavish manner. We wish to thank you, Omaha. That your interests are our interests, your industries our industries, and your people our people, was graphically shown in the way you opened your doors to every one of us.

Omaha, we see in you one of the coming cities—not of West merely, but of the country. Tracing your growth we see you have expanded mightily since 1900. In twenty years your population has almost doubled. Since 1910 your census returns show that you gained approximately 72,000. Your skyscrapers are models of cleanly, dirt-defying modern buildings. Your hotels are adequate. Your residences are examples of the finest in architecture and their well-kept lawns indicate pride and prosperity. As we glance up Douglas street, with a peep now at your Rialto, now at the Fontenelle, now at the new Telephone building, now at the Brandeis stores—we feel that this is indeed one of the most magnificent thoroughfares in the country.

The University of Nebraska is FOR YOU, Omaha. We appreciate your sincere hospitality.

IS SPIRIT BURIED.

Is school spirit buried at Nebraska? That you don't have to scratch very deep to find it, is again made evident by the response to the Student Council's call on the single tax proposition. The president of nearly every campus organization turned out at the mass meeting and great enthusiasm was shown. If this pep is carried over until everybody is brought to the polls on Thursday and Friday to vote on the question, the thing will be put across. The Regents and even the law-makers are not going to refuse anything when the student body shows that they want it.

Then, again, it does seem that the students are not interested in things which require real effort or sacrifice on their part. Some class organizations have been urged, instead of giving their annual "blowout," to turn their initiation fees, which amount to no little sum, toward the memorial gymnasium fund. They turned down the suggestion, unwilling to forego the pleasures of the social event for something more lasting. It will take some magnanimous action of this sort on the part of the students to really convince the legislators and the people of whom we expect contributions, that we seriously want a bigger and better University.

EDITORIAL OF THE DAY

(Wyoming Student.)

THE DEEP BLUE SEA.

To an individual who desires to get all he possibly can out of his stay here at the university, outside activities offer a field of invaluable experience in most any line one may choose. Those who stand aloof are missing a goodly share of their education. In like manner, those who go in for outside activities as a major, generally see even the chance to further pursue an education in this institution. Between the devil and the deep blue sea there seems to be a pretty good road. Though some of the hills are a "grand old grind," they say the scenery at the top is worth the climb. Furthermore, those who have tried a route down by the deep blue sea report that the road is pretty badly washed out, that the water is high, and that swimming is hard work. The trail back to the highway is so steep and full of loose rocks that, of the small number who dare to attempt it, there is a high percentage of casualties. Others who have traveled on the other side say it is a monotonous country, and though the going seems hard enough, the finish is but little higher than the starting point, and that the devil is himself stupid.

Your capacity is a personal matter which you must decide for yourself. Size up the different activities you might care to enter, placing the most important things or the things you do best at the top. Measure yourself. Estimate the amount you can handle. Discard the rest and go to it. Undertake only what you can carry to completion and let what is attempted be well done.

Vacation Work

I want to hire some University students for next summer.

BUT

I do not want those who are looking for common canvassing or selling jobs.

Dignified Salaried Positions

Every University student to whom I have offered a position for the summer has accepted.

LEARN how to earn $500 to $800 this vacation. Two hundred students last year made $678 each. Several made over $1,000. This ad will appear only today.
