THE ANNUAL WITH A PULSE.

The 1921 Cornhusker, which makes its debut on the campus today, might well be called the "annual with a pulse." It not only throbs with the life-beats of the activities of the school year 1920-21, but it mirrors the work of many months. The students who have assembled the material which goes to make up the new year book deserve a large amount of credit, for they have worked diligently—many of them late at night during the past few weeks.

To Jack Landale, the editor, and Hugh Carson, the business manager, should go the credit for the success of the book from an executive standpoint. From experience on the Daily Nebraskan and the Nebraska State Journal, the editor of the book was able to forge ahead with plans, without unnecessary delay. The business manager staged one of the most brilliant sales campaigns that Nebraska has ever seen, and it is safe to say that more books, perhaps, were sold this year than ever before.

We must not forget it is the little things that go to make a polished product. That is why the new annual is so teeming with interest. The whole staff has co-operated together. The worker with the smallest task has accomplished it with as much efficiency as the chairman of the various sections of the book.

You will keep the 1921 Cornhusker forever—and each year it will become more valuable to you. It's a history of the current school year, in that it even points out the time when perhaps you strayed from the straight and narrow path. Yes; that's in the Student Life section.

ARE MEN IMMUNE FROM HEAT?

These days when you believe that you have already started the summer school grind, you wonder whether nature intended that the male of species should never be bothered by Old Man Heat—in other words, that they should be immune from the "heating sickness."

Co-eds are allowed to attend classes in cool costumes that defy the hottest rays of the sun, which makes life in a classroom a pleasure—almost. Why is it that mere men must attend class wrapped up in a hot coat? We don't dare advocate the abolition of collars and ties for him, but we do dare to ask permission to attend classes minus that article of apparel known as a COAT. Maybe we have a good-looking shirt we'd like to show off, too.

"Would you mind if the men at the University came to class minus their coats?" we asked a prominent University co-ed yesterday. She was a sensible co-ed, too, and noted for her practical views.

"Not at all," she replied. "Why shouldn't they be allowed to be as cool as we are?"

There are some who think that this would be a breach of dignity, but in the face of their opposition, we offer the platform of "coatless days" for these last few spasms in May.

"Aren't the opposite sex wonderful?" exclaimed a young Englishman who is attending school in this country.

We wonder what the style of English beauty is.

THE NEBRASKA OF NEXT YEAR.

5. Politics.

Again, in planning for a banner year in 1921-22, we must consider politics. The New Websterian dictionary says that politics is "the art of government or the administration of public affairs; political opinions; party management or control."

From the first part of the definition we can see that, if we are to have general elections at the University, politics is an essential thing. It is the last part of the definition—"party management or control"—and a few other hidden meanings and applications given the term in practice—which makes "politics" take on an undesirable meaning.

We hope that in competitive offices next year that ability will be paramount—that the man of capability will be chosen for the position regardless of affiliations or organization ties. After all, an efficient office-holder is always the man who is fitted for his position.

Let us keep the word "politics" in its correct usage next year and reward MERIT, first, last—always.

EDITORIAL OF THE DAY

(The Bulletin.)
BE ENTHUSIASTIC.

Did you ever stop to think that enthusiasm is one of the most desirable qualities you can possess? The employee who has enthusiasm can make his department a live one, not only by the work he does, but by his manner of doing it. Enthusiasm is the spark which touches off that dormant power which is housed in the brain and puts it into action. Enthusiasm overcomes despondency and generates hope, self-confidence and courage. If you are not enthusiastic over your work you do not love it; you are trying to perform a work for which you are not fitted. Enthusiasm is contagious; unconsciously you pass it on to those with whom you come in contact and it arouses them to act and think as you do.

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY PLANS NEW STADIUM

Columbia University at New York City has taken definite steps to acquire a twenty-six acre tract of ground for a stadium and athletic field which may be the most magnificent in the country. It is estimated that the total cost of purchase of real estate and construction of stadium, buildings and fields will be approximately $2,500,000.

The site selected is in the shape of a semi-bowl, lending itself readily to the erection of a monster stadium, since on one side, the natural slope of the land will provide the necessary elevation for the thousands of seats. Plans for the development of the grounds include a two-tiered stadium seating sixty thousand for the football games, with a quarter mile track around the edge of the oval, a separate field and grandstand for baseball games, one or two additional practice fields for the general use of the students, a large number of tennis courts, a commodious boathouse for the crew, to be located in a natural cove from which the oarsmen may row either on the Harlem or on the Hudson, according to weather conditions, and a large, attractive and well equipped building for the locker rooms, restaurant and club rooms for the undergraduates in general in addition to a number of rooms in which the teams in training may take up their permanent headquarters, with a training table installed in the adjoining restaurant.

The new stadium and athletic field will probably make New York City the most attractive place for great
