REPORTERS WANTED

Monday afternoon the managing editor of this paper will interview applicants for positions on the Daily Nebraskan staff for the coming year. Are YOU interested? Workers—no sluffers—are wanted. Students who will work just as hard after the first month of school as they do the first week are the only ones who will make good. Workers, who will put the Rag above afternoon dates, who will study the style of the Nebraskan this year and of years past as well as the style used by publications in other universities, and those who will wholeheartedly support the editorial staff of the paper are those who will make it a power for good at Nebraska.

After all, the Daily is YOUR paper, Nebraskans, and what you put in it, you will get out of it. Just as you back it with live reporters to get the news, and pay subscriptions to make the paper financially sound, you will be repaid.

Every editorial staff of the paper has resolved to give Nebraska the best paper she has ever had. Three or four people can't do it alone, but backed by Nebraska it is an easy task. Would-be news-gatherers with ideals, are the only ones wanted, for they are the only ones who can put Nebraska Spirit in Nebraska's paper.

STEALING $2,000.00

Tomorrow Nebraska students may steal two thousand dollars from the Athletic Department. To an outsider this may not seem quite fair, but the strangest part of it is that the Athletic Department wants it done. They estimated their needs before the season started at $15,000 and for this reason a goal of one thousand five hundred tickets at ten dollars each was set. Their ideal also, was to get as many people as possible attending contests so they said that if two thousand people would buy tickets at seven dollars and a half each this would net the amount of money needed and five hundred more students would see each contest.

Right now over seventeen hundred tickets have been sold, and $17,000 is in the treasury in money and promises. If only three hundred more are sold a refund will be made on all tickets, and only $15,000 will remain in the fund.

Are YOU, sister or Miss reader of this paper, one of those three hundred that are keeping two dollars and a half from being refunded to those first loyal students who took the chance and bought at ten dollars? Selfishly the Athletic Department does not care if you buy or not, but your pride in your school, your loyalty to your teams, and your good will toward your classmates should make you want to buy today.

DIRECTORY CARDS

The University directory is under way. Those in charge this year plan to put the book out weeks earlier than it has ever appeared before. To do this they must have all students names and cannot wait for the registrar's office to complete their record. The plan for the new directory is to have every student in the university sign a card giving full information about himself and give it to a member of the Committee of 200. Thus we can have a directory soon when we really need it. It will be available for use in several weeks and save a great deal of time when it becomes necessary to get in touch with some one. If you want to get your name in that book be sure you fill out one of these cards. It's Nebraska's Who's Who, and it's not hard to get in, but mighty important.

RECEPTION FOR UNIVERSITY PEOPLE WELL ATTENDED

Chancellor Avery's annual reception to the university family—students, faculty, and all employees—took place Saturday evening in AArt Hall, second floor of the library building. A great number took advantage of the invitation to attend. The party was a "get-acquainted party" between those on the faculty and those of the student body and with the employes of the institution. The event is always the first formal university affair held each school year. The reception was held from 8 to 10:30 p. m.

The following wives of the deans served in groups of four at the refreshment table: Mesdames L. A. Sherman, E. A. Burnett, J. E. LeRossignol, C. C. Engberg, Clyde Davis, P. M. Buck, R. A. Lyman, and Miss Amanda Heppner, dean of women. They were assisted by the following ladies who entered the faculty family the last year: Mesdames V. L. Christer, L. E. Gunderson, E. W. Lantz, J. D. Parsons, J. Warshaw and B. C. Wildman.

It Happens Every Day

Entering the library at 8:15, "Doggie" Jefferson realized he wanted a date. He condescended to notice a few of his acquaintances of the year before. Swaggering as he walked leisurely down the aisle, he surveyed his field with an experienced eye.

He wore his clothes well, was handsome, tall, and dark—a collar ad. Women wore his hobby, for he knew them like a book. And he complimented himself on knowing Hoyle by heart—at least he knew about hearts. Most naturally his large brown eyes fell easily on a girl. He kept them there, it rested them. What a treat he thought. Of course he was going to sit down beside her, but he did not hurry, he wouldn't make it seem apparent. Shrugging his shoulders, he easily shook every suggestion of a wrinkle out of his handsome tweed—an A Star Best, imported,—he looked delighted in good clothes.

The Stage Is Set

She didn't even look up, as he dropped his Spanish book on the table, she seemed engrossed in study. On the other hand, she hoped he was as nice as he looked, and he hoped he would say something for she didn't really want to study. It was her first year at Nebraska and she hoped so much that she would be popular.

"I beg your pardon. Have you a pen, I left mine in my room?" Of course he really had one, but he knew the statement would open a way for conversation.

She blushed to a nice peach color as she assented and handed him her pen. She had to unfasten it from the black ribbon on which it hung around her neck.

"Thanks, I am very much indebted to you," he recited the line so well.

"Oh, do you like it. Brother gave it to me when he put me on the train" she remarked as he returned the pen.

"Did your brother go to college here?"
"Yes."
"Was he a Greek?"
The Plot Thickens
"Oh, no! Do you really think I look like a Greek?" she looked up at him as she said it.

"Wonderful eyes," he thought, but he said, "of course not. What I mean is, was he a fraternity man? A Phi Kappa Psi, or Hamilton House."
"Oh, yes. He belonged to Kappa Rho."

"That's great. So do I. What year was he in school? What was his name?" He really wanted to know her name, not her brother's.

"Chance Taylor."
"Miss Taylor, my name is 'Doggie' Jefferson. I hope you will let me be a big brother to you,—you know Chance and I are brothers," he was quite confidential now.

"I don't know whether it is proper."
"I hate conventions," he parried.
"Do you?"
"Let's go outside where we can talk,—about your brother—and yourself. There's a good movie."

As they left the reading room he smiled and nodded to all of his acquaintances. It was very easy, but then he knew women.

MAGEE'S

The Silk Hose That Has Style

—Style to be perfectly expressive must give consideration to every dress accessory—from head to foot.

—Literally to heel—for the hosiery one wears will make or mar the whole lovely scheme of dress.

—Paris, with its centuries of art tradition and its genius for harmony of detail recognized this and Paris spontaneously acclaimed as the one and only hosiery possessing this exclusive style feature which enhances the ensemble of the entire costume.

Paris welcomed "Onyx Pointex." Its leading courtiers, its actresses who are noted for their individuality in dress were unanimous in their praise of Onyx Pointex style fitness and superior dress qualities.

"Pointex" is sold in Lincoln only by Rudge & Guenzel Co., at $2.65 to $10 a pair.
