THE LIONS CLUB

President Guy Reed of the Lions club is to be congratulated upon his splendid work in helping needy university students find places in which they might work during the coming year. His organization made several drives among the business concerns of Lincoln and located many part-time positions that Nebraska students could fill. Applicants names were taken and the neediest ones given work first. The entire manner in which it was handled is a thing worthy of mention and many Nebraska students are very thankful for the help they obtained from the club. The idea is a mighty fine one and next year should greatly relieve the labor worries of prospective students.

CONVOCATION

Today at convocation Bishop W. F. McDowell will address Nebraska students. Every Thursday morning during the year Cornhusker students will have some such treat ready for them. Students who have saved this hour weepily to attend all convocations appreciate the benefits derived from always being there. Last year many eminent speakers were brought to Nebraska. This year many more interesting talkers will bring their messages to us. Get the convocation habit, it's worth your while. Begin today.

SUBSCRIBE 100 PER CENT

Achoth gains the honor of being the first organization on the campus to subscribe 100 per cent to the Daily Nebraskan. By so doing she is entitled to the free delivery service that is to be allowed to all who subscribe 100 per cent to the Rag.
Every student should be a reader of the university paper. In it are reflected every movement in Nebraska and the college world as well. The columns of the paper help as much as anything else to give one the cultural background that is advantageous for one to have.

It's not the Greek or the Latin that you've learned that you talk about when you meet a man from Kansas or Missouri or Harvard—it's the football and the basketball and the dance—boycott and the traditions of the school. How are you to get this gossip if you don't read the school paper? It's worth a great deal more than a dollar a semester to you to be able to talk Nebraska and Nebraska doings next year and in the years to come. A dollar will buy the paper for scribe today.
You. Don't miss another issue—sub-

CLIPPED EDITORIALS

Daily there will appear in the Nebraskan an editorial clipped from some university publication. College papers from all over the United States are received here and what is considered as the best editorial contained in these. This is not done to fill up space, but publications will be quoted each day to let Nebraska students see what is being done in other schools, how problems similar to those existing at Nebraska are handled elsewhere, and suggest, perhaps, changes or improvements that might make Nebraska a better school.

CONTEMPORARY OPINION

(University Daily Kansan)
Dream Power.
Now that it is almost safe to allude to dreams and visions without being at once accused of too close companionship with the wine that is red and stinging like an adder, things dealing with the lighter fancies are picking up. It is no longer a searing brand upon a man's pride to refer to him openly as a man with imagination, business life and not see that the man with imagination and the power of dreams is the one that succeeds. Everywhere in large cities or small towns—the entrepreneur with new ideas hatched by an imaginative brain is the king pin of the lot.

From the time that St Potlocks in Hickville erected a shining "Hotel De Hoss" sign above the entrance to his livery barn, up to the era wheremodern industrial giants reserve a million dollars per year for advertising purposes, imagination has played a strong hand won.

Nine times out of ten the dividing line between mediocrity and superiority is an unhampered imagination sanely used. To many people, imagination is regarded as a child-like characteristic. They forget that all around them are men who have kept and shaped the imagination of their youthful days, and with it are now making the smoke pour from the funnel of the liner that crosses the sea of success in less than six days.

College students, if anyone, should be taught to nurse their imaginations sanely. The University that does not slight that part of a student's education is the one that serves its constituency best.

OH BOY!

Last night two Little dears That wanted to Be real tough Thought that the Auditorium would Be a whole lot Better than the Rosewilde, so They went down There and they Were just about As surprised as We were, but We aren't a bit Afraid for our Fashionable reputations For they daren't tell— But darn it, We can't either.
