VOTE TODAY

Every member of the university is vitally interested in the four class elections that are to be held today. Today we choose the leaders for next semester and they should be good ones.

The qualifications of the candidates to be voted upon should be carefully weighed before a final choice is made. Today we bestow the highest honors of the different classes of the university. We must be fair.

In the three upper classes we have an opportunity to judge the students from their past records. Are they students? Do they interest themselves in the affairs of the university? Have they used questionable methods to bring in votes? Many pertinent questions may be asked of the contestants. We must be careful.

But, aside from that, there is a real reason why every student should vote. Class elections are a student tradition, a tradition in which every student may have a part. They furnish an illuminating bit of diversion from studies and promote spirit among members of each class.

By all means visit the polls today and vote!

STUDENT OPINIONS

Several days ago a splendid Student Opinion on a subject of vital importance to all the women of the university was mailed to the editor of the Daily Nebraskan. Unfortunately it is impossible to print it because the author did not sign his or her name to it. The policy of the paper in the past and the present time is to print no Student Opinions unless the author is known. It is not necessary that the name be printed with the open letter, but the editorial staff must have the names of all contributors of things of this nature.

We welcome all contributions by our readers for they reflect the ideas and ideals of our university. They give every one an opportunity to give to the school ideas worth while. We want the readers to feel that this paper is their paper and in the past Student Opinions have been a most welcome and most interesting feature of this publication.

CONTEMPORARY OPINION

(University Daily Kansan)

JUST GETTING BY

"Not tonight, Jack. The old man said I had to get down to business." And so runs the trend of much of our thought. We work because somebody tells us we must. The whole system seems to be compulsory in effect. We direct our friends not to take anything under so-and-so because "he makes you work". We recommend this or that course as being easy to get through. We sit and fidget for fifty minutes and when the whistle blows, we make one grand rush for the door.

Get by? Sure! It's the easiest thing we know! We "get by" for four years and then they hand us a diploma.

But whom in the world do we think we are beating by this wonderful little game of ours? Assuredly it would be much easier for the average instructor to simply smile and let us go. But unfortunately, when we puff out our chests and inform our prospective employers that we are college graduates, they frequently smile. And their smiles are born of years of experience.

It's the old, old story. Every year, thousands of graduates are finding out to their sorrow that a mere degree is often more of a liability than an asset. And some day we'll all have to be introduced to a pay envelope. Shame, isn't it? We take so much pride in our gold-bricking processions, only to find that all the time we have only been fooling ourselves!

The Exhaust

CLASS ELECTIONS
You stand around,
All day long,
And grab them every one,
You skip a class,
Sing a song,
And leave not a job undone,
You tell the girls,
And the men—
About great things he can do—
Ask them nicely,
For a vote—
Just as a favor for you.
Class elections—
Make you dote,
And wonder if you know,
It's tough luck—
If you don't—success is slim.
—By Pop.

Last week saw mechanics overhauling Campus Political machines under cover of darkness. Today will tell whether the campus political bosses have their machines tuned for the race.
May the best man win.

A tonsorial artist of this city advertises that he cuts hair on the "crown theory." Last summer when we interviewed Jack Dempsey, we learned that he knocked out his opponents on the "crown theory."

Wanted—A good job by an ex-president of his class. It will be remembered that the applicant gave away many "political plums" last year. Don't forget your friend.

He—"Do you know what I like about you best?"
She (cooly)—"No What?"
He—"My arm."

Directions for Voting.
Vote for the best man.
Vote as you promised you would.
Vote as your chapter politicians have dictated.
N. B.—If you follow these simple directions the best man is bound to win.

How to Get By
Look interested while in class. Of course, you're not. Ask hypothetical questions. Stay awake when recitation is going on. When answering questions, generalize and always quote imaginary authorities, especially Hoyle. And don't forget to wear the rubber tired glasses.

Advertising 13.
"Say it with flowers," whispers the "Cocoa Cola Girl" with "the skin you love to touch," with nails "that haven't scratched yet," and lips that are "Sealed Tight, Kept Right." She is some girl. "Ask the man that owns one." But when "Art Gum" calls on her, he knows when it's "time to retire" because he also knows his Master's voice and "the power behind the voice."

Maybe the freshman pharmacist who aspires to run his own Soda Emporium, can tell us if lime drinks are drawn from limestone.

FORMER HUSKER GRIDSTERS STILL PLAY THE GAME

Wayne and Wade Munn, Ernest Hubka and John Riddell are four former Cornhusker gridiron stars who are again donning the moleskins this fall and participating in the greatest of games.
The two Munn brothers are both playing with a Sioux City, Ia., professional eleven. The are both line-men, tipping the scales at the two-hundred pound mark, and gridiron performers of no mean ability. Ernest Hubka, one of the greatest line plungers that ever played with the Scarlet and Cream, is slated to be with the Beatrice town team during the present season. Hubka was captain of the Huskers in 1918. Riddell, a former Nebraska end, will play with the York National Guard team. Riddell is well-known in Nebraska athletic circles.

SWINE JUDGING TEAM TO ATTEND BIG SHOW

O. M. Krueger, Paul McDill, Mason Yerkes, Paul Taggart, Carl Sieber, and C. W. Hermann constitute the Varsity Swine Judging Team who will represent Nebraska at the National Swine Show at Peoria, Ill., Oct. 3-7. The team and Coach Savin left Saturday at 1 p. m. for Peoria.
The men have been doing practice judging constantly since the State Fair. They are so well trained in judging hogs that in the final tryout for a class of eleven entrants there was a difference of only eleven points between the high and lowest scores. Those having the six highest scores were selected for the team. Other close contenders for places on the team were Cecil Crowell and Harvey Sing.
