FROSH MEN GATHER TOMORROW MORNING

Hundred Per Cent Showing Desired.
 First Gathering for New Male
 Students in the Armory.

A convocation for all men in the Freshman class will be held Thursday, October 6, at 11 a. m., in the chapel of the Armory. It is urged that the male students in the first-year class show their Nebraska spirit by attending this gathering with one hundred per cent attendance. Fraternities and other organizations are asked to see that their Freshman students attend en masse. The University band will give a short concert in front of the Armory at 10:45 a. m., immediately before the meeting.

The purpose of the get-together is to teach the new men students some of the Cornhusker traditions and introduce them to some of the University faculty members. The gathering will be led in Nebraska songs and yells by cheer leaders who hope to win a permanent place before the grandstand at future football games this season.

The Innocents society will have complete charge of the meeting. Executive Dean C. C. Engberg and F. W. Luehring, director of Athletics and physical training, will give short speeches.

DENVER CONVENTION IS REPORTED AT VESPERS

Just because you were fortunate enough to have a chance to be a college girl instead of an industrial girl is no reason why you should look down upon a girl who has to go out and fight against odds for her very existence. That is what Al Dettman said in her report in Vesper service, October 4, 1921, of an experiment conducted in Denver during the summer months. Devotionals were led by Ruth Lindsey. Special music for the service consisted of a saxophone duet by Miss Hazel Beckwith and and Faith Dunn, accompanied by Mary Bost.

The Denver Y. W. C. A. sent out a call to all the large universities of the United States to send representatives to take part in this experiment. The girls were to come to Denver, go out on their own resources, without references or recommendations, and find a job in some factory, associate with the girls in the factory, live under the same conditions and support themselves on the salary paid. Ad Dettman represented Nebraska University. She reported the conditions found in practically all the factories in Denver. The girls were not paid living wages, the conditions under which they worked were detrimental to their health and morals. The rest rooms were small, shabby, poorly ventilated and dirty.

These industrial girls compare favorably with the college girl in appearance and actions, yet they have had no chance for health, no chance for an education, and no chance for security. How do you treat the maid who cleans your home and the man that empties the ash barrel? Do you feel above these people? This problem is indeed a live one. Christianity is the only thing big enough to solve it. These people do not want charity; they want justice.

M. G. WYER SPEAKS TO FRESHMAN CLASS

Malcolm G. Wyer, University librarian, delivered the regular freshmen lectures Monday afternoon and Tuesday morning, taking for his subject, "Uses of the Library." Prof. Wyer explained to the freshmen the working organization of the university library, the Dewey decimal system, and the location of the various classes of books in the library.

The value of outside reading to college students was stressed by Prof. Wyer. He told of some statements made recently by J. Holland Rose, a professor at Oxford university, who recently lectured at the University of Nebraska. The Oxford professor said that in the lives of most great men outside reading has had greater influence than their regular studies. Prof. Wyer told how in the early days of the war, Earl Grey, minister of foreign affairs for Great Britain, always had three books on his desk which he pursued during his leisure moments. They were usually a history, a contemporary novel and a standard novel. One of his favorite contemporary novels was by Dorothy Canfield, daughter of former Chancellor Canfield, of the University of Nebraska. Earl Grey, though himself an ardent sportsman, says that reading really affords him the greatest recreation of all. He has written a short book on Recreation, which Prof. Wyer strongly recommends to all university students.

He explained first how essential it is that every student should know how to use the library, and understand the various departments. Only a part of the library is located in what is commonly known as Library Hall. Each separate college has a library of its own, like the Agricultural College library, and the Engineering College library. The library for Medical Students is located in Omaha, but is still a part of the large University library here, because it is all run under the general administration. The college libraries are often subdivided into branch libraries, as for instance Chemistry, Physics and Zoology branches.

To grasp the size of the library, Mr. Wyer stated that there are one hundred and fifty-six volumes here now, and from six to eight thousand new ones are added each year. The Board of Regents of the University has allowed twenty-five thousand dollars annually for the purchase of these, and also for the rebinding of old ones, compiling certain magazines and other works of that sort.

The time in which we are living has been called "The Age of Print." We can find articles in various magazines of the day on any subject in which we are interested, by aid of the "Reader's Guide to Periodical Literature," and this current literature is the best we can possibly get on the subject. Nearly any article of this sort can be found in this library, along with the previous issues of the same magazines; there are bound copies of magazines as far back as forty of every word in the English language, are also books with which every student should acquaint himself.

Mr. Wyer then explained the whole classification system and how to go about finding a book. It is called the Dewey Decimal System, and was invented thirty-five years ago. Now it is generally used everywhere. All the different subjects are divided into ten divisions, one of which is given a set of numbers. For instance, Philosophy covers from one hundred to one hundred and ninety-nine; the next subject, say English, covers two hundred to two hundred ninety-nine, and so on, up to one thousand. Then these courses are subdivided. The card catalog system is the real key to the library, and this is just to the right of the reading room. Among all plans tried, this seems to be the most satisfactory way. And so satisfactory is it, that business men have adopted it in their lines of work. The alphabetical form of catalogue is used. The lists of authors are placed alphabetically in one place, and the subjects in another. Mr. Wyer also gave special directions as to how to secure a book after finding it.

In closing his talk, Mr. Wyer gave the freshmen a few hints on general reading, and followed them up with examples. Mr. Wyer urged everyone to read good books, worth while articles, instead of the current fiction of today.
