THE PARADE.

At four o'clock this afternoon a parade in honor of our football team will start from Twelfth and R and follow the band to the Burlington depot. Every man and woman at Nebraska should be in this parade.

The team is in wonderful shape. For weeks it has been going through grueling practices, and every member of the team has trained as hard as he could. It has not been fun for the men that worked. The hours have been long, the work hard, the mental and physical discipline as strenuous as these men will ever encounter in their lives, but the remuneration to the fortunate ones is very great. They will represent Nebraska in the East.

Coach Dawson, in his speech at the rally last Friday evening, pleaded for the active co-operation of every man and woman in the school. Each and every one of them has a part to play in making the team more effectively represent Nebraska, he contended. Now we have a chance to show them how we can help when we want to! Here's the plan.

Twenty-five men are leaving here to battle one of the finest gridiron machines in the United States. They will be hampered in sleeping Thursday night by the inconveniences of the Pullman. Their food will be different from what they had here. They will be restless after the long trip. They will be on strange grounds and before a crowd that will be hostile, in that they want, above all things, to see Nebraska beaten. We can't be there to cheer—but we can leave such an impression by a successful sendoff for them that they will know that we are behind them heart and soul—four thousand strong.

If you are a loyal Husker you'll march in the parade today. Let's go!

SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE.

Tonight the University Players will go into action for the first time. They will present the laughable farce "Seven Keys To Baldpate," with a cast of players well worth seeing. Every one of them has done a great deal of work in dramatics, and their work is above that of the ordinary stock company.

As a final windup of the grind of rehearsal, the play was given last night at the State penitentiary. There's not a rough spot anywhere and those seeing the play tonight will have an enjoyable two hours.

Too much credit cannot be given the people responsible for this work. The coaching has been excellent. The people in the cast have worked as hard and faithfully as men and women can and the result is a thing worth while.

Nebraska is fortunate in having such a splendid dramatic department. Through this department we are able to get a certain culture which would otherwise be impossible in Lincoln. Few good plays come here. When they do their prices are so high that it is almost ruinous to attend. The only possible nights are Monday and Tuesday evenings and necessarily must interfere with University work. The players, on the other hand, make it possible for us to attend productions on Friday and Saturday evenings when little or no preparation must be made for the next day's work. The charge is ridiculously small and the work is professional in its finish.

A treat is in store for those students who are fortunate enough to see the play produced this week by the University Players.

Contemporary Opinion

(Daily Cardinal)
(University of Wisconsin)
The Canes Appear.

The senior law men are now wearing canes, don't you know. These gentlemen got together and decided that it would be just the thing in view of the open season for traditions.

The men are proud of their decision and to a man they may be expected to comply with the practice. They deserve the commendation of their fellow students for showing such spirit.

It will be interesting to observe how the tradition will be respected. Maybe the guardians of the tradition will club the non-conformist over the head with their canes or perhaps roll up his trousers and trot his across the upper campus to sing a song to the engineers.

Or perhaps the men will feel that the custom is a matter of personal pride and will leave the observance up to each man concerned, realizing that every man who counts for anything will respect the tradition.

Hats off to the law students and success to their venture.

Student Opinion

To the Editor of The Daily Nebraskan.
It does not appeal to those who make a practice of "swiping" what more honest people pay for that by taking a paper and causing the list to run short they deprive the honest subscriber. It should appeal to them, however, that they are forcing a certain psychological condition upon their own minds that penalizes their spirit, for life if it becomes habitual. The "Rag" only costs a dollar for a semester. By making the effort to "swipe" it they show they esteem it to have a value. Since between eighty and ninety copies are sold for one dollar the "Rag Picker" subjects his soul to a practical lesson in petty thieving for a cent and a fraction. I speak in this way because I wish to call the matter to the attention of some thoughtless students who may engage in the practice and yet would not consciously do a violence to their own being.

The Exhaust

On the campus, when girls meets girls, giggles ensue. When Louise met Mary and told her a "deep male voice" had finally said it would call again at six, the giggles were 'among those present.' And Mary said 'thank you.'

"Hum," she mused, "I wonder who it can be! Oh, maybe it's Jack. I haven't seen him for two days. Or perhaps it's Jim. The Sig Gar dance is Friday night. I surely would love to go." And Mary was launched on the sea of imaginings.

All afternoon Mary's microscope showed under high-power the succession of owners of "deep male voices" whom Mary's mind pictured.

Jack, of course, really should start things to patch up that infernal quarrel. And the Sig Gar dance was not to be sneezed at. Then, of course, it might be brother Stan. He often did call on his way through town. Or it might even be George from home. Or Bill Dunn, the handsome—

The bell—Five o'clock at last! And Mary went to the house, to find the usual quota of girls—and others.

Dinner had but just been announced when one of the freshmen called Mary to the phone.

"A deep male voice, Mary!"

Her heart fluttered, but Mary said into the telephone: "Hello!"

"Blister Heel Shoe Co., talking. The shoes you ordered have come."

And all Mary said was "Thank you."

ETIQUETICAL DON'TS FOR FRESHWOMEN PLEDGES

1—If the furniture is badly depleted, don't attribute it to negligence. It may be the after effects of a fire.

2—If the silver spoons are engraved or bear the crest A-T-O, do not think that it is to be used for the course a.t.o.—a tangerine ordinaire.

3—It bespeaks bad manners and ill breeding to blow the foam off the charlotte russe.

4—After dinner, if you haven't finished dressing when your friend calls, be careful what you slip on to come down.

5—Just because it's dark in the movies, don't relate your roommate's secrets about the man whom she said was such a good lover.

6—When the conversation at the dinner table pertains to Red Orr, don't be worldly wise and insist that you are aware of the blue-dyed brand of overalls for it relates to his terpsichorean technique and the same is not dead but dances on.—Iowa State Student, Iowa City, Ia.

NEBRASKA GRADUATE GIVEN APPOINTMENT

Miss Olivia Pound, '95, assistant principal of the Lincoln high school, has been appointed a member of the committee on objectives of secondary education and material of instruction of the north central association of colleges and secondary schools. This is an important piece of work and it is hoped that the findings of the committee will be of great value to the secondary schools. The committee will meet at Chicago at an early date. Miss Pound has also been reappointed by the president of the national education association on the committee on sources of revenue. Dr. W. B. Owen of the Chicago normal is chairman. The committee will hold its meetings at Washington, D. C.

At the Des Moines meeting of the national education association, Miss Pound was made secretary of the department of secondary education. At the meeting of the Nebraska state teachers' association at Omaha on November 9, 10, 11, Miss Pound will serve as chairman of the resolutions committee.

PERSONALS

Prof. Earl W. Lantz of the teachers' college has been refereeing football games at Bethany.

Prof. Reimund, superintendent of the Tekamah schools, was a visitor at the teachers' college last week.

Dr. Fordyce was in Scottsbluff and Beatrice, last week, giving intelligence tests. He is going to give the same tests at Osceola and Tekamah within a few days and he hopes that these schools will run as high as the others.

The bureau of professional service has a call for a man to handle the following: Teach food analysis, milling and baking in a state university; and act as food analytic for the state board of health.

Adrian Newens, director of the university school of music, and Thurlow Lieurance appeared before a state convention of Victor Dealers which is meeting at Omaha.

BLIND STUDENT TAKES SIXTEEN COLLEGE HOURS

Imagine carrying sixteen hours of work in the university and never opening a book. This is just what is being done by Bert A. Johnson, the first blind student in the history of the school.

Johnson is registered in the arts school and attends all the classes and lectures given in his courses. He takes lecture notes by the New York point system, which he says is far more tedious than long hand. All the assignments are read to him by his room-mate, who receives his board and room for this service.—Silver & Gold, Boulder, Colo.
