THE Y. W. C. A.

The greatest aim of the Young Woman's Christian association in the university is to be a help to the students and to assist them in the problems that confront them while in school. It is an organization of the same extent, maintained by them. It is one of the most democratic associations on the campus, in organization as well as in its work. There are no restrictions as to membership other than that every member must declare herself in sympathy with the purpose and ideals of the association. Not only is every girl eligible, she is invited to join.

The Y. W. C. A. promotes interest in things worth while and promotes a spirit of equality among all the women of the student body. Along with this it provides wholesome amusement and entertainment and helps the students to get acquainted. There is no distinction made for class or rank and everyone is on equal footing. Every member is interested for the scope of opportunities for service is broad and the spirit is of such friendliness as to inspire confidence and a desire to enter into the activities.

Just now the Y. W. C. A. is asking for financial support. Their budget has been shaved to the limit and if their good work is to continue, they must have funds. The financial depression makes it hard for many to contribute, but those that are able should be as generous as possible. It is for a democratic cause, one that is conceded to be worth while. Ask your conscience how much you ought to give.

THE SHOW HABIT.

There are many influences in and about the college which in one way or another affect the scholarship of the student, but there are few influences which have done more to discourage scholarship than movies and vaudeville. By this is not meant that these two classes of amusement do not have their value, but rather that they do not have the value given them by some students.

Working people who are busy all day and whose evenings are free to spend as they wish should have amusement and as a rule they must get this amusement from an inexpensive source. The college student is however in somewhat of a different position. His evenings he may, with propriety and profit, spend in study. He cannot afford to spend them regularly in moving pictures and vaudeville houses. As a rule the same students always attend the shows. They make the rounds from week to week of all the shows in the city. Tracing back the scholarship of these students it will be found that they are usually the delinquent.

The question will be asked, "what can a fellow do, one must have some recreation, he cannot study all the time?" There are occasionally good plays and celebrated artists coming to the city and though these cost more than the commonplace productions, it is better in the long run to see such high class entertainment than to sit through all the worthless exhibitions which appear throughout the year. Better than the show habit would be the habit of reading good literature or the habit of daily recreation in some form of athletics.

THE RHODES CANDIDATES.

Selection by the committee of the five men to run the race for Rhodes scholarships, wins for the fortunate ones the highest phrase. While not more than one of these men can come out ahead in the final selection and it may be that none of them will win out, the proof of their high character and scholarship comes with the first selection.

There were twenty-five applicants in the running and many other men in the school might have tried for the honor so the selection of these men rates them as among the most aggressive in the school. The committee which chose these five men from the list, looked carefully into the character and personal ability of each man. The school work of each candidate was carefully investigated and not one of the selected five were chosen for anything but what they actually are.

Study in an English university is not a chance given to every student. There is no doubt but that Oxford is among the best in England and the simple fact that these five men are eligible to enter the college without taking entrance examinations gives them high rating among students at Nebraska.

Contemporary Opinion

(The Daily Cardinal.)
INDIVIDUALISM.

Today when crowds and mobs and concerted groups play such a prominent part in our thinking, the individual as such is liable to be made very little of in the midst of the complexity in which we live. Some say that the day of the individual is past and that the day of collective humanity has come. They declare that the ripple of the individual is lost in the titanic surge of mass action, and that the process of progress is the conflict and interaction of groups.

This attitude is to some a denial of the supremacy of the individual—but how flimsy is any theory that denies the value and importance of the parts which constitute the whole. The individual is the basis of society. He always was and, if our minds are not turned topsy-turvy by some unforeseen cataclysm, he always will be. He is everything. He is the beginning and the end, of the summit of evolution. No matter how much men associate in groups, it will always be the individual who will forge and create, dream and build. No, individualism is not at stake. It is just being regenerated.

Student Opinion.

To the Editor of the Daily Nebraskan: While the argument presented in the Daily Nebraskan last week in the form of a plea that students in the different colleges forget their college when at a football game, is good, there is yet to be presented the other side of the controversy.

All of the hats selected by the colleges thus far have been of the University of Nebraska Scarlet and Cream. This brings out to the attending public at the game, the fact that most of the students are wearing the university colors, a thing not very apparent in the past. This alone, if it will bring thousands of the students to the games with Nebraska colors, is enough of an argument for the continuance of wearing of the caps.

It is thus to human nature that one must get behind his home town before he will get behind his home state and then his country. It is also a part of the same human nature that a person who gets behind his college is going to get behind his university, of which the college is a part. Spirit for a little thing creates spirit for a big thing.

The plea of the writer a few days ago was written in what he believed to be the best interests of the university. He argued that the football players were playing for Nebraska not for a separate college. That is true but the students of the colleges are also for Nebraska and what is more they are advertising the colleges of Nebraska, which is the place where the people of the state send their children. Students entering the university, register in a college not in a university and if the students of that college can show the people that there is a real live awake college at Nebraska there will be another great argument for sending students to Nebraska.

—Booster of the Caps.

Cornhusker Queries

All questions for this column should be addressed to Cornhusker Queries, Daily Nebraskan, Station A. We want you to fire all kinds of questions at us every day. We will answer them. We believe this is an excellent opportunity for students to acquaint themselves with the historical and traditional facts concerning the university. Ask us anything you want to know.

The column is already attracting considerable interest on the campus, as shown by the following queries:

Q—Has Nebraska ever met Pittsburgh on the gridiron previous to this year?

A—No. The Huskers and Panthers will face each other for the first time next Saturday in the Smoky city.

Q—Why is the Daily Nebraskan called the "Rag"?

A—One of the men who was instrumental in founding the Daily Nebraskan was Frank A. "Rag" Riley, Riley, '98. Because of his nickname, the paper has come to be known as the "Rag."

Q—What is the significance of Ivy day?

A—Ivy day is perhaps Nebraska's dearest tradition. In a symbolic way, the senior class presents the keys of seniority to the members of the junior class. The tradition was founded in 1901.

Q—Has the "Cornhusker" always been known by that name?

A—No. The annual was known as the "Sombbrero" for many years.

The Exhaust

The printers spoiled our geography lesson yesterday. The co-ed thought that Baton Rouge was a new cosmetic. The printers made it Eaton Rouge—we wouldn't were afraid of painters' colic.

There was an "unfortunate slob Who was badly in need of a job Instead of employment He got 'de employment Of hearing the economists sob.

"What a college graduate knows about love," states a contemporary, "depends upon which sorority he learned it from."

Wonder what Nebraska co-eds know about the gentle art. From recent reports and rumors they must be learning things as evidenced by the absence of jewelry from many chests.

Anti-fussing societies have become a reality in some colleges and they threaten others. 'Tis a very potent idea and so different. To give our brains hasn't been able to learn anything about this invisible empire." The Pan-athletic has given out the statement that it wishes to formally take a stand against this great menace with the Bolshevik tendencies.

As we pass by some of the houses it dawned upon us that last night had been Halloween, and that someone had been playing roughly, "some more."

In Years Gone By.

Nineteen Years Ago Today.
Before a crowd of over four thousand enthusiastic spectators Nebraska triumphed over the Haskell Indians by a score of 28 to 0.

Seventeen Years Ago Today.
Nebraska met Minnesota in Minneapolis, but after a hard fought game was defeated by a score of 16 to 12.
Ten Years Ago Today.
At convocation the university chorus, under the leadership of Mrs. Raymond, gave a splendid rendition of Hayden's cantata, "The Creation."

Seven Years Ago Today.
The third number of the Awgwan appeared, which far outshone the previous numbers. On the cover was an excellent cartoon of Dean Enberg, by L. L. Slack, with the caption: "The Campus Kaiser."

Two Years Ago Today.
Thirty new members were elected to the Dramatic club following the dramatic tryouts which were held in the Temple.

SOCIETY

Beaver City Club.
The Beaver City club of the University of Nebraska enjoyed a wrennie roast at the caves Saturday night. A large number of the members were there.
The Beaver City club was organized a number of years ago, being one of the first "town clubs" to be organized in the university.

The following officers were elected: President, Merlin R. Garey; vice-president, Hermanus Baer; secretary-treasurer, Helen Atwood; club editor, Robert L. Garey.

Personal Notes.

Several students of the university school of music took part in a program at the convocation at the Nebraska school of agriculture this morning. The ladies' quartet, composed of Allie Brown, Irene Long, Louise Stonehocker and Ethel Bass, all pupils of Madam Gilderoy Scott, gave several pleasing numbers. They were accompanied by Margaret Weaver, Miss Ada C. Malenka, reader, also took part in the program.

SENIOR LAWS DECIDE TO NOT CARRY CANES

President Eugene Dornbaugh called the senior law class together Tuesday morning to consider the custom of carrying canes. After a few remarks on either side of the question it was put to a vote. The boys were as loud as the eyes, and a standing vote was necessary. The result was contra by one vote. After a brief consideration of other senior business the meeting was adjourned.
