HOMECOMING DAY.

Homecoming day is the school's annual welcome to the alumni of Nebraska. This year the attractions are to be many and of a varied nature. As the first event, the day begins with the annual frosh-sophomore olympic battle. Both sides are primed and ready for the fray. In the afternoon Nebraska battles Kansas. The All-University party, in the armory, will be the attraction Saturday night.

The entire program has been centered about the alumni and the events of the day have been planned for their entertainment. Every former student should get into things and make the day more lively. Rock Island park, the scene of the thrilling underclass battle, will accommodate a great many spectators. In the afternoon the alumni will be given a chance to assist once more in helping to drown out the Jayhawk and root for a Husker victory. The dance in the evening is to be a "get acquainted" affair, and many old friendships should be revived and new ones made.

The school most cordially welcomes the Nebraskans of days gone by. The school is your host, and if you want anything—ask anyone—they all want you to feel at home.

THE FRESHMAN VARSITY.

Each year a great many freshman men attending the university try out for the first year football team. Night after night they work. Hour after hour they spend in the most grilling sort of physical endeavor. They have to observe the same training rules the varsity does.

Very few Nebraskans realize what a good freshman squad means to the school. In the first place they furnish the new blood that is to take the place of the old, in the years to come. In the second place, they furnish the varsity a fight whenever they need it. Coached in the plays that are used by our opponents to be, they teach the team how to successfully cope with them in the regular games.

But what pay do these men get for this?

True, they do get the friendship, the exercise, and some of them a red sweater symbolical of success among freshmen. However, if these same men met worthy opponents that would battle them to a standstill, if they fought on our field where the gang would be for them, or on foreign fields where there would be no one to cheer for them, it would increase their morale.

They are all humanly susceptible to the successes their hard work brings. The recognition they would gain from battling college elevens throughout the state would make them work harder. The self-consciousness they might have when playing their first varsity game would not be so great if they had a chance to play during their freshman year.

A regular schedule, similar to that in vogue in eastern schools, would do much toward keeping the men at work, in making them take their work more seriously, and give them training that would be helpful when they are candidates for the varsity.

CO-EDS ATTENTION!

Today, the girls' annual Cornhusker luncheon will be given at the Lincoln hotel. Every year, on homecoming day, this get-together for all the university girls and the alumni is held. It is an excellent way to show spirit and every loyal Cornhusker girl should attend. After the luncheon the girls will go in a body to the football game where a special section of seats will be reserved for them.

For several reasons it is very important that the girls make a big showing at this game. In the write-ups of several recent rallies and parades, mention has been made that the girls were conspicuous for their absence

University girls are loyal, intensely so; they have just been slow in giving expression to their loyalty. Surely the mention that the girls were "conspicuous for their absence" is enough to arouse their pride and ignite dormant patriotism. So far this year the girls have never organized or attended any function in a body, but now is their chance.

This is the best opportunity that will ever arise for Co-eds to retrieve their reputation as whole-hearted supporters of every university activity connected with football. That phrase, "conspicuous for their absence" cannot be construed otherwise than to mean that we did not do what was expected of us.

If every co-ed will go to this luncheon and then to the game with the rest of the "gang" they will be sure to make themselves noticeable by their presence. Nebraska women want to make an impression, collectively, of course, so besides just being there they should make themselves heard. Although not endowed with voices like fog horns, that is no reason why Husker girls can't yell. It would be an interesting experiment to notice what effect a great outburst of enthusiasm on the part of the girls would have on the cheer-leader. Suppose it is tried just to see what that man looks like when he is really pleased with a yell!

There is sure to be a very large crowd in attendance at the game. There will be many alumni and visitors, and, so we understand, Kansas is going to bring a large delegation of boosters. Nebraska must convince our visitors that we have pep for they will judge us accordingly. We will have some competition in cheering and it will never do for us to be outdone on our home ground. It is up to us to prove to the alumni that the Nebraska spirit is as strong as ever and gaining impetus. Remember, the alumni were once students here and they have their own idea of what the student body ought to do. We cannot afford to disappoint them and it is imperative that the girls give their united support to the cause of supporting Nebraska and her football team in a manner in which they deserve to be supported.

Girls, attend the luncheon and then come to the game with the rest of the crowd and help to show the world that Nebraska co-eds are not to be scoffed at when it comes to the manner in which they support football.

Bizads.

All Bizads are requested to wear their caps at the game Saturday. Those who do not have caps make purchase at the A Star Best.

The Exhaust

Following in line with the disarmament program, the Uni. band has started to disband.

Some college chap was seen wearing congress shoes Wednesday. We didn't think that Congress boots would have any political influence at convocation still, you can't always sometimes tell.

Congratulations to the Corn Cobs the new campus organization. We hope the same are rough and tough, as we hate seedy numbers.

Student Opinion.

Question: Should we have school on the Friday after Thanksgiving? Here are some of the answers we expect to receive:

Joe Daugherty: "I think every student should be glad to come to school Friday so that he may improve his time in the development of his culture."

Ralph Ireland: "I don't believe we should be required to go to school on Friday as I always set aside Friday afternoons for practicing my Terpsichorean marathon."

Ruth Brown: "I do hope they don't have school on the 25th for we had planned to spend the week-end in Wahoo."

Grace Stuff: "It doesn't make any difference to me because I never go to class anyway except when I have nothing else to do."

Alex Hollenbeck: "I can't think of attending school on Friday the 25th as I have an all-day appointment at my tonsorial parlors."

"Red" Layton: "I will be so tired after making so many touchdowns in the football game that I won't feel like going to school on Friday."

CORNHUSKER WANTS OLYMPIC SNAPSHOTS

Students of the University of Nebraska who attend the olympic Saturday morning should take their cameras along with them to the battle and procure as many snapshots of the contests as possible. The Cornhusker staff will soon be calling for interesting pictures of student life during the year and pictures of the olympics are much needed in the annual yearbook.

STUDENT OPINION.

To the Editor of the Daily Nebraskan: Your very "a propus" editorial in this morning's "Rag" concerning the Oklahoma "Jazz Hounds" impels me to say something that has been at the tip of my tongue to say for some time.

Did you notice during the Oklahoma game when the "Cornhusker" was played and every loyal Nebraskan rose to his feet and uncovered his head, that every Jazz Hound and every other Oklahoma booster also rose to his feet and remained bare-headed and silent until the last note? It was one of the most impressive bits of good sportsmanship that I have ever had the pleasure of witnessing. Due probably to a few unfortunate accidents that day, it may have seemed to the Sooners that too often when they started to cheer we started hooting or cheering for the purpose of drowning the cheers of the smaller number. This was probably not true but it may have seemed so to the Sooners.

Winning the game is the big thing at a football contest but it is not the only thing. And if our cheerleaders and the students in general will help to improve the quality as well as the quantity of the cheering; by cheering their team when it comes on the field; by cheering each opponent that is taken, hurt, from the field; and by numerous other acts of courtesy and sportsmanship in our cheering; even though we beat them and beat them decisively—as we shall—we shall gain their lasting friendship and respect, a thing fully as much to be desired as the victories of the gridiron.
