

HUSKERS HOLD

ANNUAL FEAST

 them. I look for an unbeatable team next year and I will be on the jobs to do what I can for them. I expect a good basketball team this year.
 "Please boys leave your smoking material with Jack until the games are over."

Robbins then went on to give a history of football. He told of uses made of it by the Romans and Greeks in training for the military life. He told how the game had spread to Britain and to Ireland and how the latter country had developed the greatest race of kickers ever known. That is why Notre Dame has an advantage in the kicking end, he said. He referred to the Cornhuskers to Jack Best to learn of the long string of football heroes on the Nebraska record.

Captain Swanson was the next speaker on the program. He thanked the students for the support shown to the team this year and predicted that the Cornhuskers would have the biggest team in America next year.

Captain-elect Hartley took exception to the use of football for military training purposes. He declared that military training was used by Coach Dawson in training Nebraskans for football. He called Swanson the greatest captain any Cornhusker team ever had. He then asked that the students give the same support next year as they showed this season.

Chancellor Avery Speaks.

Chancellor Samuel Avery gave praise to the coaching staff of the Cornhuskers this year. He declared Dawson was the greatest of all coaches, and this last season as the greatest football season in the history of the University of Nebraska. It was the greatest in mainly exhibition and courage, he said.

He praised F. W. Luehring as the man who organized victory—who brought Coach Dawson to Nebraska. He told of how the coaches all worked together.

The chancellor next gave a share of the praise to the student body which so loyally supported the team. He said the enthusiasm, devotion and loyalty of the students to the coaches, directors and the team helped much. He declared that nothing was so precious to the student body as a clean record. He asked that the amateur record at Nebraska might remain absolutely clean.

Luehring Asks for More Men.

Director of Athletics Fred W. Luehring told the students how little he had heard of Nebraska before he came to the Cornhusker school and of how much bigger it was than he had heard.

Luehring appealed to the men to all get out for as many athletics as they can. He declared there are men in the university who are not cut for football but who could make the team. He said that no matter how many come out, if the coaching staff and the field are not sufficient to take care of them all, more coaches and more fields will be provided.

Luehring said that the New York papers have discovered Nebraska and that the east has this year found that it can look further west than the Alleghany mountains, its limit in the past.

Students Cheer Dawson.

Such yelling as has not been heard at Nebraska in many years greeted Head Coach Fred T. Dawson. The cheering lasted more than a minute without a sign of abatement.

Dawson refused to take much of the praise for the wonderful team Nebraska had this year. He turned much to Coaches Frank, Day and Schulte. He praised the freshman squad and told of how hard they made the varsity work.

Dawson then told of the grit which characterized the Cornhusker team this year. He cited John Pucelik, who in two games had his arm out of joint four times and still continued to play. Wright who always refused to admit tiredness when he could barely walk. Hendrickson who crawled on his hands and knees into position rather than be taken out when his knee was wrenched in practice. Things like that were characteristic of the entire squad, he said.

Dawson asked the students if they were worthy of such representation as the team is giving them. He told of the high praise for Nebraska which is over-running the east. He asked that Nebraska should not get cocksure for that might spoil all the hopes so bright now.

Dawson then said that the men being alert would succeed in life. He said that a man who quits in the outside world when a problem confronts him is just as much of a quitter as the one who lays down in a football game.

Day and Frank Speak.

Assistant Coach William Day, last year's captain, was the next speaker. Before starting his speech, Day asked that the banqueters stand for a moment in silent tribute to Dusty Rhodes, Cornhusker warrior of years ago, who gave the supreme sacrifices in France. For one minute every Cornhusker stood and silently paid tribute to that Cornhusker, a greater fighter than who has never been seen, but who was nevertheless no better a fighter than the football men of today.

Day gave praise to S. F. Schulte who took his place at coaching while y was undergoing an operation early in the season.

Assistant Coach Owen Frank, former Cornhusker captain, praised the team as being as good as there is in the United States. He said that the Cornhuskers must not get cocksureness, for that resulted in a big fall for one Oklahoma football aggregation.

Moving pictures followed the speeches. The pictures showed the wonderful celebration which the Cornhuskers gave to their team on the return from Pitt. Pictures of Captain Swanson, Captain-elect Hartley and all of the coaches were shown.
