

Nebraska Freshman Captures Bandit In Thrilling Chase

When the folks at home begin to fret about the numerous checks required to keep the Nebraska gridiron athletes in school, the wearers of the moloskins may now point to the experience of a member of the freshman squad and demonstrate the value of football training in every day honest-to-goodness life.

When Orley Gardner, alleged check forger, created much confusion at the City National bank, Monday afternoon at 3 p. m., by pushing one of the bank tellers through a plate glass and knocking another out of the way as he dashed for liberty, a true Nebraska hero entered the case.

This hero was Gerald Merritt, a member of this year's freshman football squad and a pledge of Phi Gamma Delta.

Hearing cries of "Catch that man" coming from the bank, as he was walking down O street, Merritt saw Gardner running through the door after he had broken away from the tellers inside. Taking after the man, Merritt, accompanied by two or three others, chased the alleged forger east on O street to Twelfth, where they followed him into the alley running between Twelfth and Thirteenth and N and O. Here Merritt with true gridiron form made a flying tackle and downed the man. Assisted by K. L. Curran, Victoria hotel, and H. T. Dinsmore, 1441 South Eleventh, the man was brought back to the bank and placed in the custody of the police.

Gardner admitted to the police of having forged the name of J. T. Travis to a check payable to "Ray Munson," amounting to $14.30. Previous to this attempt, Gardner had been detected in passing alleged bogus checks. As he came into the bank, the tellers recognized him and as they attempted to engage him until the police arrived, he suspected the procedure and made the bolt for liberty, Stewart Lense, one of the tellers who was pushed through a plate glass, received severe injuries in one wrist.

Pick Your Moral for 1922
(Reported by an exchange as passed by the Hades convention of the Ancient and Ornerly Order of Imps.)

The knocker: To be locked in a nice, red-hot sheet-iron cell with a bunch of draft dodgers. Costume: Barefooted up to the ears.

The lapper: To be strapped beneath a large dipper of red hot buzzard oil. Lapper forced to drop a dollar in the slot every three seconds or dipper dumps and scalds his—forgetfulness.

The kicker: To be shut in a comfortably heated iron cell (about 700 degrees above zero) with 300 iron-jawed mothers-in-law. He must take part in each one's wrangle night and day.

Stay-at-home: To be seated comfortably in a nice, large, easy, red-hot iron armchair. He must sing, "Let the others do the work, do the work," night and day. Cessation in singing followed by the quick jab of 17 devil forks tipped with white heat.

The growler: To be comfortably stationed shoulder deep in a lake of of liquified hot air and buzzard oil. Forced to duck beneath the surface every two seconds, by a spike tailed sentinel on the bank with a ten-prong fork. Amen.

Neophytes seeking entrance into the charmed society of the 40 Hommes et $ Chevaux had best be warned by motion pictures taken of a recent Seattle wrecking crew in action. A drop from the sixth floor of an office building, encased in a barrel, was but one of the mild tests of nerve involved in the proceedings.
