SHERWOOD EDDY

A great student leader is coming to the University of Nebraska February 8, 9 10. Sherwood Eddy is his name. He is recognized all over the world as the outstanding leader in Christian thinking and living among students. The University is fortunate indeed to secure the service of such an individual for a period of three days. A man of Mr. Eddy's caliber will have a far-reaching effect on the entire student body and the influence he exerts will by no means be confined merely to the three days he is on the campus.
 If a revival of religious thought among the students results from Mr. Eddy's visit, he will not come in vain. Temporal things are occupying too prominent a position in the minds of students at the present day. Universities the nation over are now recognizing the need of development of student thought along spiritual lines. This is the work of Sherwood Eddy. He has had great success at many other institutions and we sincerely hope for his the same here.
 The Nebraskan will have more to say about Sherwood Eddy.

THE GASOLINE TAX

The gasoline tax, as proposed to the special session of the legislature by Governor McKelvie, perhaps does not immediately affect a great many university students. The most of us, however, are dependent for our education upon parents who are taxpayers and whom the gasoline tax will hit.
 The proposition is seemingly to take the tax off land and place it on gasoline. Instead of taxing land to keep up the highways, the man who uses the highway in transportation will pay the tax. In other words, the renter rather than the owner pays the revenue. The highway is surely an asset to the land, so opponents of the measure object that the tax be removed from the land.
 We believe, however, that this is not the real reason why the proposed tax is unpopular with the public. The word "tax" is just at present the most hated and dreaded word in the state of Nebraska and it doesn't make any difference whether it applies to gasoline or ice water—the people are going to oppose any new form of taxation.

STUDENT THRIFT

That while a student is in college he should not only sow a healthy crop of wild oats but also indulge in numerous luxuries and spend a great deal more money than merely a respectable existence justifies. The amount of money college students spend has become a proverbial joke—wags of all ages and nations have made use of it in various ways. It has not even been superseded by the Volstead act.
 While there are, naturally outstanding cases of riotous spending among students, the most of them are not a bad lot. It costs real money to go to school and the average student, we believe, exercises judgment as to its disbursement. As a matter of fact there are not a great many students right now who are possessed of a burdensome amount of wealth. They might spend as much as the humorists claim, providing they could get their hands on it.
 There seems to be particular reason for saying that a student spends in excess while in school. Every student realizes that if he succeeds, here, he is reasonably sure of success in after life. What good reason, then, can be advanced for the much talked about spendthrift habits? Students resent this attitude and very justly.
 If all the money that has been attributed to spendthrift students were to be heaped in one big pile somewhere in an open desert, the mad scramble for scoops and shovels and trucks would make the gold rushes of '49 look like the breaking up of a prayer meeting.

NO MORE SOCIETY

The Nebraskan has discontinued its society department. A Pan-Hellenic policy forbids sororities to report society events to any papers and the Nebraskan is thoroughly in sympathy with this movement. It has been apparent for a long time that university groups were giving a great deal of time to social activities and then bragging about it afterwards. Every week-end it was a race to see who got the longest write-up or who had the most out-of-town guests.
 Society write-ups have no appeal to the majority of the student body. They have but little news value. They have a serious effect on university patrons out in the state and certainly the groups derive no benefit from them.

We are truly sorry this is disappointing to our cake eaters and tea hounds—but it has to be done.

Contemporary Opinion

OF BALANCE

University men seem to cultivate a growing inclination to disparage the graces of what has been nobly called the fair sex. "You can't depend upon them" and "I can't give them anything" are too common expressions on our campus. The spirit of mistrust and suspicion is ungallant and discreditable between the men and women students of the University. Such a situation tokens something unwholesome in a University where there seems to be no excuse for such a thing, where students have an opportunity to enjoy the most healthy form of companionship.
 The upshot of the whole thing is that the man who belittles consistently everything feminine is somehow out of order. Remember that it is true that a man dislikes another because he has done rather than received an injury, that distrust comes from a heart undeserving of trust, and this may offer the reason that is explanatory of the attitude they do not distrust the women; titude a great many men have taken, they distrust themselves. They do not suspect the women; they fear suspicion. They do not resent the words of others; they are unconsciously trying to cover up their own bitterness.—The Daily Iowan.

At the Theaters

Orpheum.
 The Orpheum bill this week returns to the high class standard of vaudeville which has been presented this season.
 Kitty Doner, who was such a favorite in Al Jolson's extravaganzas, is the head-liner. Sister and Brother Doner are also extremely lively and the trio is good to look upon Moody and Duncan are with us again and better than ever before which is always saying a good deal. Their act is always good and Miss Duncan's comedy is sure-fire.
 The act called "Synecopation" was well received and with a little re-arrangement should go much better. Greene and Parker in their black and tan act resort to rather shady material for a part of their laughs but on the whole were thoroughly enjoyable. Margaret Taylor's dancing on a 'tight wire' was deserving of much more than it received. Ed. E. Ford is a first class entertainer and his recitations at the close of his act were splendid.
 A few of the extremely sophisticated who break as if headed for a fire, missed one of the best acrobatic acts the Orpheum has ever played. Lohse and Sterling are first class. They do their work with a zest and enthusiasm that is a pleasure to watch.

MUSICAL FRATS TO HAVE LARGE CHOIR

One of the most interesting and important movements under way at the present time is the organizing of the Acapella Choir (unaccompanied) by three musical fraternities—Symfonia, Sigma Alpha Iota and Mu Phi Epsilon. The choir is to be composed of about thirty voices, chosen from all applicants. Anyone may apply and everyone interested is especially asked to make application.
 It is hoped that a program may be given before the end of the school year. Meetings are to be held at the Commercial Club.

The Exhaust.

"This is my downfall" sighed the Hydrogens as they were duly united with the lone Oxygen.
 One of yesterday's headlines reads: "University Expenses cut for Coming Year." We wonder if they can't do something to cut the expenses of Uni students.
 Assistant in Lab: "You are late. Are you always late to classes? Have you a class before this period?"
 Student: "No."
 Assistant: "Well then you should not have any excuse for tardiness in the future."
 Student: "Don't worry, I always have an excuse when I'm late."
 Why not be someone, subscribe to the Rag and read it? Don't be a Rag pecker all your college life!
 Elevator Girl at Miller & Paie on stopping a few inches below the floor level: "Step or stumble."

CHEMISTRY.
 A class in chemistry 1 will be given this semester if a sufficient number of students register for it. All interested should report at once to chemistry building 201.
