

BIGGEST ALL-UNI PARTY PLANNED

February 11 is Date Set for Last Student Mixer of Present School Year.

COMMITTEES SELECTED BY CENTRAL CHAIRMAN

New Features Planned for Final Get-together of Second Semester Next Month.

Announcement of committees for the last and biggest All-Uni party of the year to be given in the armory on February 11, was made last night by the central all-university party committee which has staged three or four parties so successfully this fall. The party will be the only one of the second semester so that a large crowd is being prepared for by the committee.

The committee will organize its work at a meeting to be held at Ellen Smith hall today at 5 p. m. The central committee members are that all chairmen and committee members be present so that definite plans may be set in motion. Further announcement of the plans for the party will be made after the committee meeting. The committee members are as follows:

Entertainment Committee.
Joint chairmen, George Salter, Lillian Blanchard; Bernice Elwell, Francis Carothers, Rose Ceril, Don Overholt, Eugene Ebersole, Merle Loder.

Refreshment Committee.

Decoration Committee.
Thomas P. Rogers, Irene Simpson, joint chairmen; R. Shellenbarger, De Verne Hunter, Al Miller, Edna Bobrman, Myra Lanner.

NAT'L PAN-HELLENIC DELEGATE ON CAMPUS

Miss Ruth Moulding, a visiting delegate of Alpha Phi and a delegate of national Pan-Hellenic, gave an interesting talk to the local pan-hellenic council Thursday afternoon. She discussed Nebraska's mode of "rushing" in comparison to other schools and told of the sentiment of the national Pan-Hellenic council in regard to "rushing." Miss Moulding attended the national pan-hellenic council meeting last year and was able to impart a real message to the members of the local organization.

ALL DAILY NEBRASKAN SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS DUE

All Daily Nebraskan subscription books must be checked in at the student activities office by 5 o'clock Friday evening. It is very important that all persons having these books out comply with the wishes of the business staff in this matter, so that the sales may be checked up.

All fraternities and sororities which have not already paid for their house delivery must notify the Nebraskan at the student activities office by Saturday noon. A two week's extension of time will be allowed to those who intend to subscribe, but no deliveries will be made to these organizations unless they notify the office of their intention to continue their subscription. Organizations which are not paid at the end of two weeks will be discontinued.

SIGMA DELTA CHI SELECTS NEW MEN

Honorary Journalistic Fraternity Announces Pledges and Elects Officers.

Officers for the second semester, and new members for the organization were elected at the regular monthly meeting of Sigma Delta Chi, held Wednesday evening at the Grand hotel. Kenneth McCandless, was elected president, Ray Stryker, vice-president, and Jack Austin, secretary-treasurer.

The new members are as follows: Herbert Brownell, jr. Reede Reynolds. Edward Buck. James Fiddock.

Brownell and Buck are night editors on the staff of the Daily Nebraskan and James Fiddock is business manager of the publication. Reynolds is on the reportorial staff of a local newspaper.

Plans for the skit to be given university night were discussed, and plans for a joint meeting with Theta Sigma Phi were agreed upon, at this meeting.

The organization will have its picture taken at 12 o'clock today at Townsend's. All active men and pledges are expected to be present.

DEBATERS PREPARE FOR FIRST CONTEST

Preliminary Work for Iowa-South Dakota Argument Battle Is Begun

Candidates for appointment to represent the University of Nebraska in the debates, April 7, with the University of South Dakota at Lincoln and with the University of Iowa at Iowa City on the proposition "that the United States Should Cancel the Allied Debts" are getting to work in preparation for the first preliminary contest, to be held by the middle of February.

Are Co-eds As Frivolous As They Are Sometimes Painted?

(Kansas City Star.)

Not long ago news dispatches told of the suspension of the Ghost, the humorous publication of the students of George Washington university, because it printed pictures portraying the co-ed in more or less realistic poses and sprinkled its pages with epigrammatic observations of "girlish" eccentricities.

Other college publications long have printed spicy pictures and jokes in which the co-ed figured prominently, but the authorities under whose general supervision they are issued are broader-minded than those of George Washington university or outside "reformers" have not called their attention to the "horrible state of student morals" the magazines seem to portray.

All of which leads the New York Daily News to ask: "What is the matter with the modern college girl? Is she frivolous, shallow, pleasure-loving or not?" And in answer to its own question News quotes Miss Anne E. Hickenbottom, dean of Hunter college, as follows:

"I find the modern college girl an absolutely honest, serious minded individual who is interested in her work before anything else. One cannot, of course, always generalize. There are all kinds of girls in a college, but I do not hesitate in saying that the majority of young girls take their tasks seriously and mean to succeed."

"Greatly Exaggerated."

"This criticism that the modern college girl is frivolous and shallow and only interested in getting pleasure out of life, is greatly exaggerated, I find. My experience, at any rate, has been different.

"You cannot blame them for seeking social relaxation, considering the intensive manner in which they work. Life today is different from what it was twenty years ago. But I have a great deal of confidence in the good sense of our young girls."

What are some of the so-called sins chalked up against the college girls?

"I know of none except that she is more impulsive than her older sisters," Miss Lucetta Daniel, welfare director at Whittier hall, Columbia university, says.

"The college girls, as I know them," she says, "work hard and conscientiously, and nobody can say they seek pleasure unduly. Criticism of the co-eds is unjust, because it is not justified."

But here came the masculine cynics who publish the humorous, semi-humorous and pseudo-humorous reactions of the student body toward the campus life. In peppery verse, epigrams and sketches they present the girls as modern Cleopatras and sophisticated super-vamps.

"Our library may not have so many books, but one can always pick up a high-powered date there."

While the Ski-u-mah, University of Minnesota, devotes more than a page to a cub reporter's recital of a search for "the perfect co-ed," of course, this acme of co-educational perfection could not be discovered.

The Beanoport, Boston university, sends out this spark:

"Co-ed: I hear the girls' basketball team has petitioned to be allowed to play in men's basketball suits."

"Ed: Yes, they found that wearing bloomers made them catch cold in their knees when they put their street dresses on."

And even the Jester, Columbia university, comes to bat with a fling:

"Philosophic Prof: What is Art's greatest appeal?"

"Unfair Co-ed—His curly black hair, I think."

JUSSERAND NOT TO COME TO NEBRASKA

French Ambassador Unable to Accept Chancellor's Invitation for Commencement.

Ambassador Jusserand writes Chancellor Avery that he regrets deeply his inability to accept the chancellor's invitation to be present next June for the university commencement exercises. The French ambassador was also invited to be with us two years ago, but was likewise unable to adjust his program to that of the university.

M. Jusserand says he is particularly sorry not to be present on this occasion because of the fact that he considers the need to be greater now than for a long time to cement the friendship between the two republics. He thinks that much has been printed of late concerning France which is neither fair nor true. In most vigorous fashion M. Jusserand denies the truth of statements which are being made to the effect that France favors submarine warfare "German fashion." Neither does France expect to build a fleet of expensive battleships. The ambassador says that France plans only to begin one capital ship in 1927, for the purpose of beginning the gradual replacement of the present French tonnage. He also points out that France now has ten such ships, and has consented, at the request of the United States, to scrap five of these, in addition to having already scrapped five partly built—the completion of which the war had prevented.

UNI COMMERCIAL CLUB NOMINATES OFFICERS

At a meeting of the university commercial club at 11 o'clock yesterday, the following men were nominated as officers of the club for this semester:

President, Harry Adams, J. Wilbur Wolfe, N. Tyson; vice president, Frank Beiser, H. Harms, H. Mann; secretary, Burford Gage, Bob Eastwood, William Hillie; treasurer, Bob Hartwell, Alford Raun, Kenneth Cozier.

The election will be held next Thursday at 11 and all club members are urged to be out and cast a vote.

UPPER CLASSMEN PICTURES SOON DUE

Cornhusker Management Asks Juniors and Seniors to Hurry With Their Photos.

That it is imperative to have all individual junior and senior pictures for the Cornhusker taken at once at the Townsend studio, was the substance of an announcement given yesterday afternoon by the management of "Everybody's 1922 Annual."

Those who have charge of the photographs for the year-book say this is necessary in order that the pictures of juniors and seniors may be finished with the consideration that is due them.

"If all these pictures are taken at the last minute, the finishing is bound to be done hurriedly if the book is to be printed on time," declared Editor Randol Thursday. "Mr. Townsend wishes to make each individual picture a splendid likeness, but he cannot do this if the students do not give them their cooperation by making an appointment early for a sitting."

All the individual pictures in this year's book will be placed on a uniform background. This will make a harmonizing color scheme with the rest of the book.

Approximately all social fraternities have had their group pictures taken for the annual, but professional organizations have been slow are urged to make appointments to Townsend's studio immediately.

Norma Talmadge, through her publicity manager, just written the Cornhusker that she cannot accept the honor to judge the "Vanity Fair" contest because of the fact that she is leaving at once for an extended tour of Europe. Although the judge has not yet been decided to take her place, it is expected that a world-renowned artist or beauty expert will be chosen.

MYSTIC FISH TO GIVE FRESHMAN CO-ED PARTY

Freshmen girls will be given the opportunity to meet and become acquainted with their classmates at a Mystic Fish party to be given in honor of all freshmen girls, Saturday, January 28, from 3 to 5 at Ellen Smith hall.

NATIONAL COMMITTEE OF GEOGRAPHY MEETS

One of the important results of the national committee on high school geography, of which Prof. Bengston of the university is chairman, has been to enlist the support of the commonwealth fund in financing further studies. The report given at Washington during the holidays led to this end and also to active co-operation with the national committees are now being appointed and plans for development of studies in these sciences are being worked out on a more detailed and scientific basis than has even been attempted before in this country.

HUSKER WRESTLERS MEET AMES TODAY

Nebraska Grapplers Journey to Iowa Aggie School to Battle Cyclones.

The Nebraska wrestling team invades the Ames camp today, preparatory to a dual meet with the Cyclones tomorrow afternoon. Due to the strength of the Cyclone team, as evidenced by their victory over Indiana last week, the Scarlet and Cream grapplers are not highly confident of winning, but can be relied upon to give the Cyclones a stiff battle. The Huskers held the final workout at the armory last night.

The Cornhusker team, composed of the following men: Capt. Reed, Pickwell, Whealy, Isaacson, Thomas, Renner and Troutman, leaves for Ames at 1:50 today. Dr. Clapp and Assistant Coach Troendley will accompany the team. The Huskers will take a short workout at the "Y" in Omaha.

Huskies Are Prepared.
The final workout in preparation for the Ames meet was held last night. Tryouts were conducted in the 135 pound and 145 pound classes. In the 135 pound class, Isaacson defeated Ted Smith. In the 145 pound class, Thomas threw Brown. Several (Continued on page 4.)

W. S. G. A. CONTEST WINNERS ENTERTAINED

Dinner Given at Ellen Smith Hall for Victorious Membership Contest Co-ed Team.

The Women's Self Government association board and council entertained in honor of the winning team in the membership contest, at a dinner Thursday evening at Ellen Smith hall. About fifty girls were present.

ALUMNI BACKING EDDY MEETINGS

Harold Holtz, Alumni Secretary, Calls Meeting for Today at Grand Hotel.

BEN CHERINGTON TO MEET WITH COMMITTEE

Nebraska Grads to Speak at all Uni Student Houses During Next Week.

Over a score of Nebraska alumni have been selected to help in the organization for the Sherwood Eddy meetings to be held on the campus in two weeks. They will meet today noon at the Grand hotel with Harold Holtz, secretary, and Ben Cherrington. Plans have been made for these men to visit the various fraternity houses soon to tell the story of the life of Sherwood Eddy and to emphasize the purposes and importance of the meetings here on the campus.

The men who are being asked to help in this way together with the organizations before which they will speak, are as follows:

Acacia—O. J. Foe.
Alpha Sigma Phi—Prof. Dana Cole.
Alpha Tau Omega—Ralph Weaverling.
Alpha Theta Chi—Dr. R. J. Poole.
Alpha Gamma Rho—Prof. F. E. Mussell.

Delta Sigma Delta—D. W. Albrecht.
Phi Alpha Delta—Marcus Poter.
Phi Delta Chi—Prof. R. E. Cochran.
Phi Tau Epsilon—Floyd Hall.

Eddy's Activities and Purpose.
Many Nebraska students have asked about Mr. Eddy's work in American colleges since the armistice. Before the war, Mr. Eddy traveled over Asia visiting the colleges there with the well known John R. Mott, but his work since that time has for a long time been concentrated in the United States. Some Nebraska students met Mr. Eddy at the big Student Volunteer convention in 1919 in Des Moines. They will remember how, after his address to the assembled students, he was followed to a neighboring building by fifteen hundred questionnaires. For two solid hours, Mr. Eddy replied in (Continued on page 4.)

Statue Of Athena Adorned With A Sporty Titian-Hued Hair Net

What is the world coming to? Is even art giving way to "flapperish whims?" Pheidias would turn over in his grave if he knew that Athena of Lemnos was wearing a hair net. At the foot of the stairway in Art hall stands the tall, "junoesque," divinely perfect statue of Athena, "sporting" a titian-hued hair net. Poor Pheidias! When he devoted the greater part of his life in modeling in bronze the Grecian Goddess, little did he think that even the copies of the original would ever succumb to the fashions of the ultra-modern American girl.

The maidens of Greece, from which no doubt, Pheidias received his inspiration, allowed their hair to flow gracefully over white shoulders. They were proud of the wealth of "crowning glory," and revelled in allowing it to "fluff" where it wished; and it has been said, when it did not "fluff," it was made to. The matrons of Greece coiled their hair in a loose knob at about a forty-five degree angle, and enhanced its beauty by artistically tying satin ribbons around the forehead. This style was particularly becoming to the ladies, in whose foreheads "little lines of worry" were beginning to appear. Can't you picture the ladies of Greece dancing with bare feet over dewy grass. Can you imagine them wearing a hair net.

This statue, which is a plaster cast of the marble copy in Dresden, does not need a hair net. For a Grecian reproduction, the hair is very flat and unattractive. Even if the statue were living it could not remove the net, for alas! Athena has no arms. How cruel to take advantage of a helpless piece of art by adorning it with a hair net. It would not be the least surprising to go into art hall some day and see the tall, stately Athena wearing a pair of galoshes.

Don't Make The Error Of Not Taking The Daily Nebraskan

January, the month, derives its name from Janus, a Roman God, who took precedence over all other Gods. He had two faces—one youthful, looking forward; the other aged, looking backward. He was the God of all beginnings.

This is the month of January and it would be well for all of us to look around and see what we might be doing now that would be of great help to us in the future. There are a number of such things which everyone may realize upon a little reflection. Perhaps the greatest of these errors that the student in the University of Nebraska is making at the present time, is the failure to subscribe promptly for the Daily Nebraskan for the second semester.

January, the month, derives its name from Janus, a Roman God, who took precedence over all other Gods. He had two faces—one youthful, looking forward; the other aged, looking backward. He was the God of all beginnings.

Unless you are looking forward now, with some idea of what is ahead of you, and are seeing the value of reading a paper written by Nebraska students, of Nebraska students and activities, and for the Nebraska students, some day you may look behind you with your elder face of Janus and realize, with vain regrets, what you have missed.
