THE PRAYING COLONELS

Did you ever hear of "Bo" McMillin and the "Praying Colonels" and have you ever wondered where the kick came from that helped 'em whip Harvard and some of the other big boys? If you have, and are curious to get the straight dope, read what "Bo" McMillin has to say about it in an article in the February issue of The American Magazine entitled "Fighting for Old Centre."

It is not the policy of The Daily Nebraskan to go out of its way to toss sweet bouquets at other publications, but when something like this comes out, something which will have a kick-back and make the reader a better Husker, a better man, and a better woman, we say: "Go to it."

Centre college and its football team have received unusual mention in the press during the past three years but this is the first time that "Bo" has opened up and given the inside stuff in a straight from the heart and shoulder way that "gets you."

Nebraska students who read this story will feel a greater appreciation for the zealous devotion which hundreds of their fellow students are showing for "Old Nebraska" in many lines of campus activity. To read is to feel—to feel the glory of fighting for a worthy cause.

Fighting for Centre—even as fighting for Nebraska—meant a lot to that foot ball team. "Bo" and his mates were earnest enough to pray about it. "We don't pray to win," he says. "We play to win, and pray to play our best. We make no request for glory or for any of the 'breaks of the game.' We ask instead that, whatever the outcome, we may fight like men to the last ditch, and live up to the traditions of Old Centre."

"I wish that folks would see what this really means, and not make such a fuss over it. None of us has broken any records in church attendance. Any of us might hand you a wallop if you charged us with being 'pious.' But we believe there's a God who wants people to be square and give the best they've got to everything they go into."

CHANGES.

It is written somewhere that all things must change. Astronomers and geologists tell us that the Heavens and earth are changing, that neither our celestial sphere or our firmament remain the same. Of course change is the fundamental reason for progress, for it was only through change that this earth grew out of chaos and our social order rose to its present level.

People do not rebel against change for it seems to be a law of life, and it is due to come to the world and every individual in it, but it does occasion much sadness and many regrets. We are more or less unconscious of the world changes, but in the college sphere where there are so many little things that we should like to preserve just as they are, we wonder rather sadly why it is that nothing can pause or stay. Former students who are coming back to continue their work are conscious of a change. Surely it causes many regrets to visit old scenes after a long absence and find them so altered that they can scarcely be recognized.

Each semester brings many changes to the student in the university. Every graduate leaves a vacancy, and though it is filled by a newcomer, it requires readjustment. While we say goodbye to one we bid another welcome and as quickly as we write this at the end of one semester's work we begin on the preface to another. Aye, verily, "all things must change to something new, to something strange. Nothing that is can pause or stay."

territory, the team is to be congratulated on the showing made. Let's stand behind them and boost, win or lose.

They have called the National Guard to Nebraska City to take care of the straggle situation. We saw them marching to the depot to entrain. From a military standpoint we would much rather trust our fate in the hands of the R. O. T. C. They look and act a great deal more like soldiers than do the guardsmen.

We understand that the Cornhusker renewed artist or beauty expert" to management is in search of "a world-renowned artist or beauty expert" to judge the Vanity Fair contest. Any artist could probably handle the situation but what possible use can they have for a beauty expert!

You have all read recent opinion of Professor Lowell, of Harvard, to the effect that inter-collegiate football is receiving too much attention, too much prominence. By way of comment, what has enhanced the reputation of Harvard herself more than the great gridiron teams she has developed?

REFRESH YOUR MEMORY

Every now and then a story appears in the newspapers that a few college students, somewhere, have committed great harm, such as brutal hazing, various forms of larceny, and vandalism in general. The average reader at once looks over his spectacles & says with a sneer, "Uh huh! College boys again!" and judges all undergraduates by actions of the reckless few.

Such occurrences have taken place here at times. There were several at other Ohio institutions this fall. And only recently a youthful student from this University was haled into police headquarters for taking electric bulbs from a dance hall—an act, directed, he said, by upperclassmen, who had forced him to do it.

The police are entirely right in arresting students for such lack of gray matter. Stealing electric light bulbs from street cars, dance halls, street lights, etc., is larceny as much as safe-robbing. Tossing rocks into windows and pulling trolleys off street cars are vandalism as much as church wrecking. It is time for students of all universities to realize this.

There is apt to rise in the undergraduate mind a tendency to think that he is a privileged character, merely because he is a student. Consequently, he thinks he can with impunity upset moving-picture signs, skip out of restaurants without paying, carry on with hots and yells long after midnight, and become idiotic in general. But students must realize that they have no special rights. In fact, they must reflect the good name of their university as well as their own in every action, and are restricted by it.

Individuals and organizations who have forgotten that, should refresh their memories.—Ohio Lantern.

The Exhaust.

Open House. You have repeated the classic sentence of identification and welcome to all the members of the first two frats which have passed you, without having encountered a real friend. You have changed your rings to the left hand, and are wishing for Jack Best to administer his services to your right. Then, at the far door, you see the man you quarreled with last night. You resolve with all your maidenly bulldoggishness, that you will simply tell him your name. Oh, if you could only run! Perhaps you could get to the kitchen—or be absorbed in some other man! No one in the line whom you really know! No oasis of refuge! Then you must brazen it out. Oh, if there were only some one behind him!

What is the commotion? Another frat! And the girl next to you says, "The Sig Gars," Hurrah! the first man is Otto Nobetter, and he's from home! In the nick of time! You thank your lucky stars as the line advances. Two more men before your dear enemy. And—you sigh deeply—you can rush on to Otto. "My name—"

Ting-a-ling! goes the telephone bell, and someone says, "Kath, they want you!"

When you've waited more or less patiently for your instructor to correct the papers and average final grades; when you've chased to Chem. hall twice a week, only to find your grades not yet posted; when you've driven all your friends nearly crazy by your eternal speculation about your 65; when you yourself are a nervous wreck because you're so afraid you'll have to take it over again!

Then when you stand in front of the class list, and your eye jumps to your own name, and you find your grade—ain't it a grand and glorious feeling? It's 78!

"I haven't seen you for an age," said the comet Halley upon seeing the earth again.

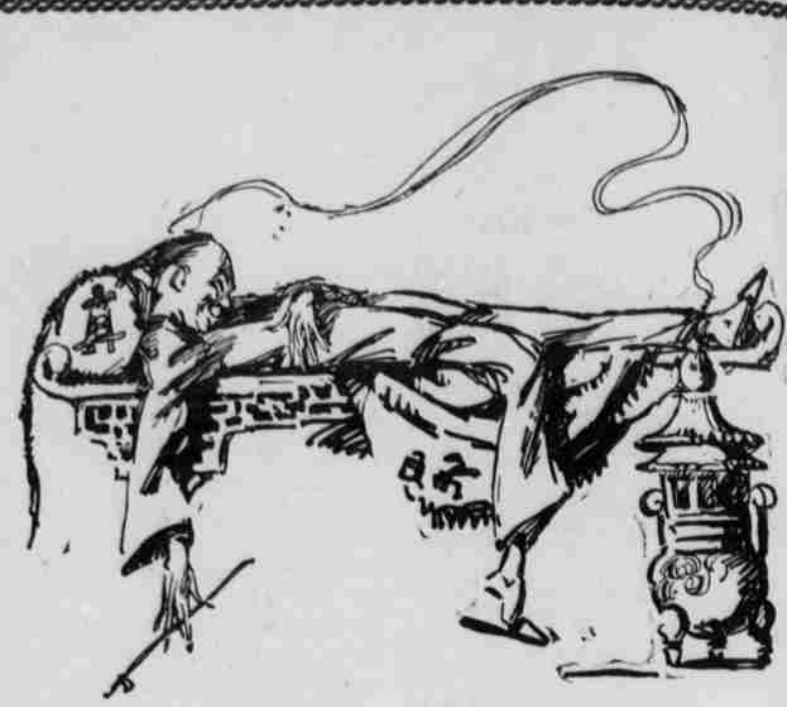

"The Busy Bees are the financial boosters, from $40 to $50 being realized at almost every monthly meeting," says a local paper.

Evidently the Bees are in the habit of stinging somebody. Every day one reads of bootleggers and ill-made wines and whiskeys. The prohibition officers seem to be working hard and they sometimes find individual making liquors, so it doesn't matter what we say: "There are still more," or "there are more stills."

"There is no evil in the modern skirt," says one writer. After all the truth of the matter is quite plain. "Honi Soit Qua Maly Pense."

"Here are clothes worth while," was the statement by an advertiser in a daily paper. We might mention that clothes have been worn by most every one since Adam's time, so that now they are a necessity as well as being just "Worth While."

To whom it may concern and to those who are merely interested: We have the pleasure of announcing that in the near future different individuals possessing real wit and humor will conduct this column in the way they think the same should be, thus
