Appointment Tuesday afternoon of Coach Fred T. Dawson as dean of men of the University of Nebraska should meet with the hearty approval of all Cornhuskers. Dawson has in his few months of acquaintance with the Cornhusker students won an admirable place among the Nebraskans. His excellent record as coach of football together with his excellent ability in the handling of men has made him one of the most loved faculty men in the Cornhusker institution.

Another purpose other than merely being dean of men is served by the appointment. The new position which Dawson will occupy throughout the year will serve to come nearer placing him permanently on the Cornhusker faculty roll than any other thing. Cornhusker students have feared every indication of other schools that they might desire to take Dawson from Nebraska and his appointment as dean will relieve some of their worry.

Dean C. C. Engberg long has been the overworked "general director" of Cornhusker students and some of his duties had to be given to some one else. Dawson is the man who can and will fill the place in the hearts of Nebraskans long taken by Dean Engberg.

Probably no two men in the university faculty are as closely connected with Cornhusker male students as are Coach Dawson and Dean Engberg. Ever since coming to Nebraska last spring, Dawson has been winning friends among Nebraska students and alumni. Ever since assuming the position of executive dean, Engberg has had a warm spot in the heart of every Cornhusker. Both men have the ability to handle students and if Engberg had to be relieved of the position of dean of men, students would not have welcomed appointment of any other man more than they greet the coming Dean of Men Dawson.

Dawson's record as a coach has made every Cornhusker student hope that he could be in some manner more tightly bound to the University of Nebraska. Other schools, they knew, would be constantly trying to take him away from Nebraska and that they felt would be disastrous for a better coach and a better man could never be found. So the university regents are to be commended on appointing Dawson to the position of dean of men.

SHERWOOD EDDY AND NEBRASKA

Professors will continue to talk, student will go to classes today and tomorrow—that is, some students and some classes—but the thoughts of the great mass of Nebraska students will be with Sherwood Eddy.

Some professors may resent this and some students may doubt it (those students and professors who did not hear Mr. Eddy speak Wednesday) but students and faculty members who did hear Mr. Eddy will say "Amen." If you don't believe it, Mr. Student or Mr. Faculty member, ask one who was there.

What were the students talking about around the table Wednesday noon?

Sherwood Eddy.
What were they thinking about Wednesday afternoon and evening?
In answer it is enough to say: "St. Paul's church was packed again Wednesday night."

Many thoughtful people have said of late:
"Nebraska students do not seem to be aware of the grave and threatening world situation of today. They do not seem to care."

The "care" part at least has been refuted, 3,500 students and faculty members attending the Wednesday morning meeting. The evening attendance was over 3,000.

"The aware" part of the challenge is being taken care of by Mr. Eddy. "At no American college where I have spoken," said the great student leader, "have so many students come so far away from the campus to hear me."

"How is this to be accounted for?" has been a general question.

Chancellor Avery and faculty members who have been at Nebraska for many years declared Wednesday that they never saw it happen this way before.

"It must be that they are eager to meet the great moral challenges of the hour. They must be hungry for contact with a great 'world mind.' In Eddy we have this to a degree far beyond anything we have had before. He appeals to this in the students and they are responding," said a faculty member.

Nebraska men and women admire the man who shoots square.

Eddy hits from the shoulder. He lugs a terrific punch. The appeal in his oratory comes from facts. It is the truth that hurts and—heals.

Eddy is shooting straight, and Cornhusker men and women are shooting square with themselves these three days.

"Professors take care of the technical culture of the students, the social culture takes care of itself, but while Eddy is with us the students have an unparalleled opportunity to face the moral and spiritual challenges of the hour," said Chancellor Avery in substance in some informal remarks Wednesday.

The university administration is shooting square with the students. Official orders have been sent to all faculty members from the registrar's office to excuse all students who cut classes to attend an Eddy meeting.

Many professors have lent their encouragement by dismissing classes which come on an Eddy hour. From the way the students flocked out Wednesday, it seems likely that attendance at 11 o'clock classes today and Friday will be extremely small.

Contemporary Opinion

THE RAZZ

Razz is the official undergraduate instrument of reform. If a freshman is different, razz him. If he has too much say, razz him. If he doesn't show any spirit, razz him. If he has more than he knows what to do with, razz him. If in any particular he is not a regulation college man—what that is—razz him.

Without a doubt the razz is the great bump-reducer. Well-timed and applied moderately, it probably has kept many a man's head inside his hat, and taught him to take a full course from the campus masters before tooting his horn in public. It has made the mighty and the lowest watch their step.

But it can be overdone. It is a serious question whether it is either necessary or fair to wreck a man's college career because he lacks the faculty of getting onto the ropes with the average speed. Whatever may be the doubt as to whether he deserves the treatment due an intelligent man, he certainly deserves the treatment forthcoming from "intelligent" men. And certainly no man deserves less ridicule and more help than the chap who seems to the rest of us to be a long distance in the rear, and whose continued presence in college under great difficulties is a matter of wonderment. That he does it is the chief fact. That he has the ability to keep up in class work should be enough to recommend him at least to the tolerance of the campus character who boasts that he can sail on a calm without cracking a book; and as for the rest of us, we know, or should know that it is not our province to render a fellow student's task harder than it is.—The Daily Kansan.

The Exhaust.

D'ja ever go
To class and Find out you had
To get some work
In the following
Morning. Then you
Remembered you had
A date that P. M.
And another that
Night. Finally you
Solved this dilemma
Since work you can't shirk
For with dad you're in bad
So by staying up till
The cows come home
You get the work done
Then go to class
The Prop says
Theme ain't due till
Tomorrow!
Gosh. Ain't it Fierce!

At the Theaters

ORPHEUM

The Orpheum bill this week offers some rather different acts and as a feature Mae Worth and 'Phil' Circus-goers will remember the Worth family as being one of the leading riding families in the circus world today. This act is one of the best of its kind in the world.

Nellie and Jo Jordan do a snappy wire-act and went over big. Claude Golden is an exceedingly clever card manipulator. One of the most enjoyable acts on the bill is 'Home Made Justice' in which Sam Mann is featured. This is an excellent take-off on court procedure. Lyons and Yosco offer a first class musical number. The harpists work is splendid.

Thomas Dugan and Miss Raymond close this unusual bill with a laughable skit entitled 'An Ace in the Hole.'

This bill presents a truly diversified entertainment and should go big for that reason.

The Sick Guys have at last decided to move into the house next to the Gimmee Bita Pis, the medical fraternity. This is more for the convenience of the budding doctors than for the afflicted ones. The Sick Guys have decided to combine forces with the D. T. 'S., who suffer from that old-fashioned malady, delirium tremens. The new infirmary can accommodate the majority of the members of these two fraternities.

Chit Chat.

I never yet have put on airs that something didn't happen to ruin my self-esteem. You remember that I have often talked about Jack and what a dear boy he is? He and I have been the best of friends but I have never really dated with him since the beginning of the year. However he has a careless habit of calling me whenever one of his freshmen needed a handy date and very often, to prove my friendship, I have lugged them around and wondered why perambulators were not sent along as equipment.

The other day Jack calls me and after despatching all unnecessary essentials he asks me if I was going to be busy on the "steenth" of the winy month. Now enough is more than satisfying and I had just about gone the limit of the freshman proposition so I answered in Eskimo pie tones—"No, Jack, I really don't think I will be able to mind your freshman on that night, I have a date with a MAN."

And then Jack replies so sweetly that I thought my ears would turn to molasses, "Well, I certainly am sorry Bangs!" I just wanted you to come to our formal as my guest, but since you seem to be busy—cal you again. Good by."
Now Jane, instead of my glad rags, I shall sit in sack cloth and ashes. Proverb: Woe unto he who thinks he's smart.
