You have heard it argued many times pro and con—the contention that an education is not gleaned from books and studies alone.

But there is a difference between educational activities and time-wasting diversions. Reporting on the college paper cannot be compared to attending the Orpheum matinee.

In this connection, here is an extract from a communication written by a student to a university official: "I have often wondered if you, in condemning us individually for unprepared lessons and poor grades, have stopped to think of the cause for the same."

"We have been taught at home that it was disgraceful to be caught in a pool hall; here we find it is a perfectly respectable way to spend your money because you learn to play in an Y. M. C. A."

"We must say that we do not agree with everything just as it is stated in this anonymous letter, but we want to state that is the strict policy of the Nebraska not to run mid-week dance advertisements, although some occasionally slip through due to oversight or carelessness."

Contemporary Opinion

BAD CHECKS.

What is all this going on about bad and worthless checks written by students in the university?

Can the practice be checked and those guilty of carelessness and fraud be taught common sense and honesty? We hope so.

Doing business by "guess" is a shiftless and inexcusable method and when it comes to handling your bank account, the person who follows the "guess" method will sooner or later get in bad.

There is no excuse for permitting a checking account to be overdrawn. The remedy for this evil is to make out checks from a check stub and keep close tab on the balance to your credit in the bank.

Accept this suggestion from a former student now in the business world. Obtaining money or goods under false pretenses is a serious crime.

Major Frankforter is a member of the Lincoln reserve officers association, and his past commandant of cadets at Nebraska. His constant encouragement of the R. O. T. C. has been a great factor in the success of that unit here.

The Alumni of the Acacia Fraternity have purchased a new home for the active chapter at 15th and H streets opposite the Governors Mansion.

When you've staked Out a claim.— Got it going Good, And someone Just swipes it Gturight.— You get sore At them then, And it's not Quite Square.— They ought To treat you White.

When you've started A thing, And it gets By well, And someone Jus' uses it, Say— They're stealing Your thunder.— Just helping Themselves.— Don't even Ask "If I may."

In the Exhaust They write, The same As I, And they don't Even get An excuse, "Didja" Their style,— Inane,— And then They go And use My "Gosh!" "Aint it fierce?" Well! Aint it? Oh! My!

A young doctor who gave as a cure for insomonia "Sleep it off", is now following his own advise—in Wyuka.

We have heard of the P.P. K's and the D. A. M. N.'s (Note to the uninitiated: Pesky Preacher's Kids and Dad's A minister Now), but the other day we heard of a new organization, the D. B's, called—inside the frat—the Dumb Bells.

As we walk into our classes When the air is warm like spring, And the birds are flying northward And our hearts within us sing:

We remember that old couplet Of the storied turtle-dove; In the Spring a young man's fancy Lightly turns to thoughts of—tennis.

Our idea of inconsistency is skipping classes to go to religious meetings.

Now that we have interviewed the Sick Guys, the Eata Bitas, the Pio Cuffs, and the fraternities, we have decided to try the best sorority, the Dizzies, who got that way from Anaesthetic dancing with Jim Nasium over in the Arm—ory.

At Iowa City the oldest student is said to be seventy-five years old. If things go so well for us we may be out of college by the time we are about the same age. So much advice has come to us from our elders regarding the cruel world, which we must enter after passing from the doors of our dear Alma Mater, we have about decided that it wouldn't be such a bad mistake to be just a little older when we venture out.

"Seniors Hop March Third" is one the headlines in a college paper. We wonder if they are doing those Hop and Skip dances which grace our parties and transform them to Race tracks.

Society.

Omega Beta Pi entertained thirty-five couples Saturday evening in honor of their newly initiated members. A valentine's movie was used in the decorations and favors. Sweetheart roses were given to the ladies.

DANCING ABILITY

The ability to dance well is in everyone. But this latent ability must be developed, cultivated, perfected. A few lessons under the "Carroll System" of training a dancer, will develop these suppressed talents quickly and efficiently.
