PHI BETA KAPPA

A great honor was conferred upon a number of University of Nebraska students today when they were selected as members of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, at a special convocation. Phi Beta Kappa is the oldest fraternity in existence today and its membership is a reward for scholastic excellence.

All honors that are worth having come as the result of hard and painstaking labor. This is true of the key of Phi Beta Kappa. Such decorations as this are not handed to anyone for the asking. It represents four years of conscientious endeavor in the fields of learning.

You often hear people say, "I would not be a P. B. K. for anything." Those are usually the people who never do anything and know they have no chance of winning such a coveted honor. All honor and admiration is due to the wearers of the Phi Beta Kappa key. It signifies that they have done their work well and have not been found wanting. Congratulations and best wishes to you all, Phi Beta Kappas.

CHAPERONES

We have noticed recent editorial opinions in several contemporary dailies commenting on the fact that students have a tendency to slight chaperones at social functions. Some have criticized quite severely the actions of students in this connection.

It is quite likely that Nebraska students are not perfect in this matter but we have seen or heard of no cases that warrant editorial comment. It seems that considerate and polite treatment of chaperones at any social function is but natural courtesy. Why a chaperone should be treated disrespectfully any more than anyone else is more than we can fathom. Surely a chaperone is a guest and therefore entitled to be treated as such.

Fraternal and sororities should, it seems, take particular pains to act in a courteous manner toward chaperones. They are in a way guests of honor and as such will form their opinions of the organization on the treatment accorded them. We believe Nebraska students realize this and need no criticism.

Contemporary Opinion

SPIRIT AND SPORTS

Probably the greatest value in college sports lies in the fact that they tend to build up the health of the student body. To do this they must cover a great variety of athletics and must be participated in by a majority of students. This is rarely found to be the case. The strong and healthful students, because of their natural advantage, very naturally monopolize the places on the athletic teams.

Football, first and last, is the great sport of the Middle West, although basketball and track are coming into favor and may in time hold their own with the gridiron game. A western university with winning teams in these three sports considers itself astride of the world of athletics. They are the barometer of student pep.

Eastern colleges have their football basketball and track, but have in addition a number of other sports to which they give a far greater amount of attention than they receive in the west. Among these are rowing, tennis, lacrosse, baseball, swimming, fencing, soccer and hockey. This fact permits a larger number of students to engage in athletics and it serves also to keep the interest of the student body in sports from dying with the close of every football and basketball season.—Daily Iowan.

FREE PROSE

"Safety!!! Safety!!!" Dully, Elizabeth cried, As she wildly clutched Her new spring coat about Her. It is coming. Faster and faster, It slides. Madly she held on to Her coat.

She cast her eyes Expectingly to her feet. But the fish worm Stopped not. It slid by.

"Ever hear the story about the golden fleece?" "No. Do they bite?" When off or on my springless cot I lie In vacant or in pensive mood They flash upon the outward eye, Which is awful to go to sleep by. And then my heart with anger fills And I turn over and wish those capitol grounds Lights would go out.

A Washington, D. C., professor states that from observation he has discovered that blondes have better appetites than brunettes. Thanks for the hint, old thing, we'll remember that.

If the announcement receives much publicity a number of fair-haired sisters are going to suffer from the lack of dinner invitation.

EXHAUST

We heard of some new students who arrived on the campus yesterday. They were the extremes, and we gathered that they were "without means." The feminine member of the duo probably counted to her credit some four summers and her masculine companion had to his debit at least eighty of the same. But the interesting part of their conduct was that they, like others of varying ages, finally found their way to the classic building of books—THE LIB.

Years ago the flapper did not appear as she does today. She did not wear a sport hat, a polo coat, a brilliant scarf, a plaid skirt, light colored hose, patent-leather sandals and an innocent expression. Instead she appeared in a plumed Merry-Widow, puff sleeves, a wasp-like waist, a bustle, skirts—notice the plus number—dragons on the ground, and invisible dainty black Number Two slippers. A different, you say? Well, it was and we're glad we happened on this planet when we did.

Spring is here, and the winds do blow And the trees are all a-flow; But 'tis misery to the weary student To hear for a solid hour The drone of a prof. in a classroom Or the words of a man of glory— But a girl in a car at half past ten— Well, that's a different story.

The open season for fictitious headaches is upon us. Next time you see a girl walking with her cousin, you may know that it is her day to "put the old one over," and that her excuse will read, as have others "illness."

Her coat was tan, her stockings too; Her scarf was brilliant jade. His hair was patent-leathered down— 'Tis the way of a man with a maid.

The funniest thing we saw today was a short man, slightly fat Chasing for a co-ed Her wind-blown new Spring hat.

life of an actor. Eleven Years Ago Today The University Band gave an excellent concert at the Oliver Theater for the state legislators. Seven Years Ago Today The special house committee on university and normal schools slashed into Nebraska's share of the General Maintenance Bill, and the University was to receive smaller appropriations. Two Years Ago Today An opportunity for the University to participate in the campaign for "America's Gift to France" was given by Miss Conklin.

ANNOUNCE COURSES IN PUBLIC SERVICE

Professor Senning, Chairman of the Political Science Department, has received a communication from the National Institute of Public Research announcing special courses in the field of public service. This institute was organized in 1920 in connection with the Bureau of Municipal Research, located at 260 Broadway, New York City. Although of comparatively recent origin the Institute has already achieved a notable success. It is offering courses in Charters and Municipal Corporations, Budgets and Budget Making, Public Accounting and Financial Reporting, Civil Service and Personal Administration, Taxation and Revenues, Public Debt Administration, Police and Fire Administration, Educational Administration, and minor problems of public administration such as Statistical Methods, Committee Management, Publicity, and the like. Graduates looking forward to a special public career will find the opportunities offered by the National Institute of great help in preparing them for a definite line of public service.

All the men who direct the work of the students are specialists and men of great ability. The work of the institute is supported by such men as Herbert Hoover, Frank O. Lowden, Charles E. Merriam, E. R. A. Seligman, Delos M. Wilcox, A. R. Hatton, Raymond B. Fosdick, and Mrs. E. H. Herriman.

Fellowships ranging from $1000 to $1500 per year are available for students of high scholarship. Anyone interested in the work of the institute may consult Professor Senning.
