The institutions of learning which are located in the Missouri Valley region and members of the Missouri Valley Conference have no doubt read with amusement the slogan now echoing out from Mount Oread, the home of the Jayhawk. We refer to that interesting declaration, "We own the Valley." Until we first saw this statement we were not aware that the Valley had any particular owner, that it was property, or capable of being owned. We had always looked upon it as a good place to live and a conference composed of nine excellent, growing universities.

OWNING THE VALLEY

But we are forced to admit our error. A formidable array of championships annexed by the Kansas institution, with those held by other schools discreetly omitted, affords the proof of ownership. Were we statistically inclined, we might go into detail regarding the number of championship and titles won by Nebraska in the past twenty years. Perhaps we might be able to establish as good a claim to the Valley as our sister state. No doubt Missouri, or Ames, or Oklahoma, could do likewise.

You have all heard the old story of the man who took in too much territory. This is surely a parallel case. Our Jayhawk brethren evidently overlooked the fact that there are other states bordering their own commonwealth and that there are bigger rivers than the Kaw. But if the Jayhawkers get any kick out of a slogan of this kind, far be it from us to complain. We are very happy here by ourselves and manage to win a football game now and then. We only hope that our school spirit, if that it be, never becomes so inflated that we give vent to any such spurious statement as, "We own the Valley."

KICKING ABOUT THE WEATHER

The season of April showers is upon us. We have been seeing the sun only by spells for the last couple of weeks so everybody evidently feels justified in kicking about the weather conditions.

Why is it that people constantly kick about the weather? Generally when folks kick about something they do it with the hope of being relieved of the objectionable condition. We crab to the superintendent or the proprietor about poor service. After instituting our kick we expect the service to improve or we will shift our patronage. We remonstrate with our professors over unsatisfactory grades, generally well realizing that it is only ourself that can better the mark. Still we kick—kick about everything, kick on general principles.

But what is more foolish than to kick about the weather? Who are we kicking to, the elements? It is reasonable to kick about service or grades because there is a possibility of their being changed. But the weather is something that all the kicks in the world cannot alter, so we may as well be philosophical and accept what comes to us. This old universe does not care whether we like the weather or not. Since we must continue to reside on this earth just as it is whether we like it or not, we may as well admit that the weather is tough, but we like it.

It seems to be human nature to kick, but kicking about the brand of weather that is meted out to us is most foolish. Besides realizing its futility, we know full well that "it takes a little rain with the sunshine to make the world go round."

A. A. E. ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

Plans are being made to accommodate a crowd of at least 5000 people. The down-town display of the ingenuity of the engineer is to be in one of the Miller and Paine windows. This promises to surpass the "coffee pot" of last year which drew such large crowds of curious observers. Applegate reported that plans were complete for the dance Friday night at the Rosewilde. A six piece orchestra has been engaged and everything to complete a good time has been arranged for.

Kreuch described the plans for the parade which is to be exceptional this year, since it is to include a number of representative floats beside the band and some 800 students of the college. The field day events are to follow. Luncheon has been arranged for at the Ag Campus so that no time need be lost in coming back to town. Doremus then spent a few minutes in telling of the banquet at the Lincoln Hotel Saturday night. This is to be the final event of the week. Speakers from Omaha and Chicago are being arranged for, as well as representatives of the faculty and the local A. A. E. Chapter.
