NEW INSTRUCTIONS GIVEN TO JUDGES

Rules For Deciding Forensic Contests are Changed by Prof. Fogg

New Instructions to the judges of the State debate of the Nebraska High School Debating League are in force this year. These instructions, formulated by Prof. M. M. Fogg on request of the League, are designed to emphasize substance—analysis, use of evidence, readiness in off-hand refutation and rebuttal.

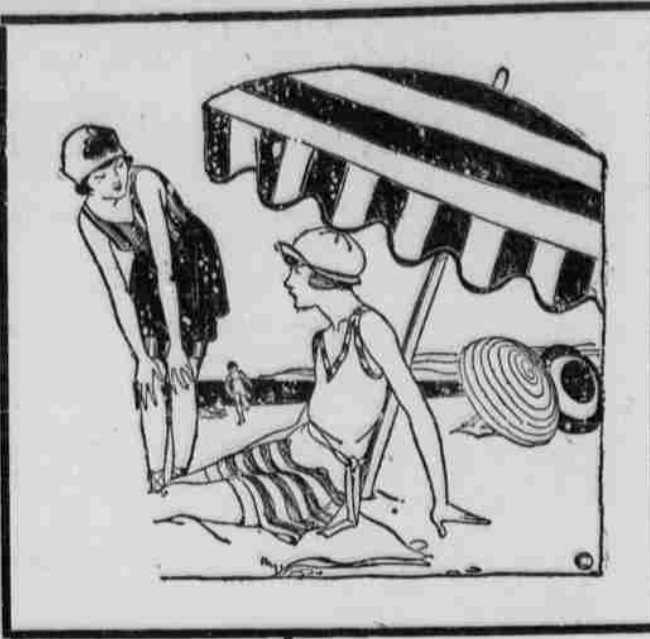

The instructions are:
 I. The award shall be made not on the merits of the question, that is, not on which side is inherently the stronger, which side the judge happens to believe, but on the merits of the debating; on the selection, use and presentation of material. That is, which team has made the more of its opportunities as debaters—has done the more effective debating.

II. In deciding which team has done the more effective debating, the judge shall consider both thought and form; but more weight shall be given to substance than to form (rhetoric style and speaking). If one team excel in substance and the other to an equal degree in presentation, the decision shall go to the former team.

A. In estimating the substance—the thinking—attention will, of course, be given to: (1) knowledge of the question and analysis; (2) weighing of testimonial evidence as to its competency and fairness; (3) reasoning—drawing inferences; (4) clearness of structure; (5) effectiveness in the rebuttal arguments, on which special emphasis is to be laid.

B. In estimating the form, attention is to be given to: (1) accuracy of English; (2) clearness, interest and good taste of rhetorical style; (3) effectiveness (clearness, earnestness, directness, good taste, ease) of the speaking.

(A more polished form may be secured, of course, by simply presenting a verbally memorized argument; but that is not debating; that fails to stress what the League wishes especially to premium—ability in give-and-take discussion, in grappling on the spot with an opposing case, in meeting emergencies as they arise.)
