NEXT YEAR'S STAFF

Yesterday the Student Publication Board considered the applications of those desirous of being on the editorial and business staffs of the Daily Nebraskan for the first semester of next year. The choice of the Board is announced in this issue of the paper.

The journalists chosen to handle the affairs of the Nebraskan are most capable. They have worked faithfully not only this semester, but during the past three years as well. They have studied the work in the classroom as well as in the office of the university daily. They have helped make the paper successful during the past year.

Both the University and those chosen should be glad because of the choice. The University will have a paper that will be a pleasure to read and the staff will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are serving their school.

ALUMNI WEEK

For many months the Alumni office has been working on Alumni Week plans. Committees have been organized, a great many people have been recruited to help in the work, publicity has been given the plan in the university and in town papers in nearly every city in the state. The Alumni Journal, as well, has been hammering away at alumni to get them enthused. Nearly all old grads have been sent special literature telling them of the events of the coming Alumni Week.

The stage is all set for the celebration and now is the time for every Nebraska student to put in a lot of good work toward making this a big success. If each student would write just one letter to some old Husker student, many of them would be induced to spend a day or two with us. Let's all push together to get more people back for Alumni Week!

"TALES OF THE CORNHUSKERS"
 Yesterday the Student Publication Board officially granted the publication of a new athletic year book. This is to be called "Tales of the Cornhuskers" and fills a need long felt at Nebraska.

In the book will be complete reviews of the entire athletic season in all major and minor sports. It will be written up from the "human interest" standpoint so that it will bring back a host of memories not only to the athletes but the student body as well.

To give recognition to those men who have served Nebraska in an athletic way is one of the reasons for the book and another—and a big one too—is to so interest all Nebraska high school athletes in the state university that they will come here to get their college training.

The book is to be given free of charge of all men who have gone out for athletics, to every athletic coach in the state, to captains of the basketball and track teams that participated in the two tournaments at Lincoln, and to many prominent athletes who have distinguished themselves during the year.

Extra copies of the book may be purchased by those desiring them and will be on sale about June 1st.

W. A. A.

Nebraska has been coming right to the front in women's athletics and the splendid organization and the systematic regulations under which their activities are conducted are to be admired.

Back of and sponsoring all women's athletics, the Women's Athletic Association is found. This organization is composed of women who are highly interested in sports and who have shown their interest by earning one hundred points of credit before they are admitted to membership. W. A. A. members are leaders in every kind of sport, they assist in managing athletic contests for women and in many ways take the initiative in making women's athletics successful in the university.

Athletics for women is a recognized necessity in college, but like everything else it requires management and encouragement in order to accomplish results. It is just these things that W. A. A. supplies so effectively. It makes the participation in sports highly attractive by arranging for class tournaments and competitive contests and, finally, after a member has earned a thousand points, they give her the privilege of wearing the coveted "N".

W. A. A. is doing a great thing for Nebraska, there would be a great void if it should cease to function. It is hoped that the organization will grow and gain momentum as its members win new honors in the athletic world.

Contemporary Opinion

MAKING GOOD

Men who make good in their college days may usually be classified in two groups.

One group embodies the type of man who has the way cleared for him the minute he enters school life, by previously relatives of note or by friends ever ready to give him a boost. In this class may also be found the man whose high school records herald him in advance.

The second group of men is composed of those who come to school unknown and unheralded and proceed to make good strictly on their own merits. A survey of the campus leaders will show that there are many of this type.

There are disadvantages for the newcomer in either group. To be much press-agented and much noticed often means that one may be unable to come up to expectations. The reaction that follows will set him back and unless he shows unusual merit will be a hard handicap to overcome. Year after year every school sees the coming of high school "bright lights" who ignominiously "fall through." The temptations of too much attention may work the evil of ego in the young aspirant and he fails to work for his place. If this ego is not fed continually, he becomes sulky and discontented and fails to fit in.

The man who has to fight his way has real problems. He must make good without notice and among a multitude of men who are receiving the most attention. He must put up a real fight and show real worth to secure his place. But to him comes the reward of knowing that he has won on his own ability. What greater reward can there be in the strife for college honors?—Ohio State Lantern.
