ANOTHER RECORD

Another new record for summer school attendance is about to be set this session. More than 600 students had registered for the second term by Tuesday evening. This in comparison with slightly more than 500 last year for the second session. The Wednesday enrollments should bring the total to well above 800. This will make the total for the year close to 3,000.

Attendance at summer school is beneficial to both students and university. For the student it means a chance to devote one's entire effort to study without interference from any outside sources. To the university it gives the opportunity to conduct classes without overcrowding.

Importance of summer school attendance is being realized more and more by students. Every summer a larger number of winter school students continue work during the hot weather in an effort to make extra credit. Every summer more and more teachers enter the university for work.

The university welcomes all these students as it welcomes all who come for the regular sessions. It is a compliment to Nebraska to have these students choose Nebraska above other schools. Nebraska appreciates this compliment and strives to serve these students in a way deserving to them. But in serving it must have co-operation from the students. And that co-operation must come in study. The shortness of the summer term makes it impossible to "skip" classes, to go without prepared lessons and other evils common during winter terms. Students must work every day. If they work the university will repay them for it. If they do not, they will receive nothing.

CONGRATULATIONS MISS HANSON

To Miss Vivian Hanson who came out victorious in the contest for the Nebraska girl to adorn the cover of the "Cornhusker Rose," the Summer Nebraskan extends its congratulations. No honor of higher character is possible than to have one's picture on the cover of a song—more so in that the "Cornhusker Rose" is a song which will live, which will be a favorite of Nebraska students for years to come.

The results of the contest which was conducted by the Summer Nebraskan and Howard Adamson, composer, were very gratifying. A large number of votes were polled and students used good judgment in picking those whom they hoped would win the honor. It was indeed a great honor for Miss Hanson to have bestowed upon her from her friends.

MAKING A START

There is more than one young man who can look with understanding upon the cartoon which Mr. Hal Coffman has drawn for this page today. They who marched proudly forth only a few weeks ago with black gown, mortar board hat and diploma are beginning to realize why college graduation exercises are called commencement exercises. These young men are just commencing the greatest adventure of the various cycles of life. The young man with broom in hand has just entered that cycle which may be aptly called "making a start."

Babyhood consists mostly of having other people wait upon you; boyhood is the cycle in which the young man lives in a world apart, a world in which the good fairy, imagination, rules supreme. The school boy and young man in college lives in a land of dreams, he sees himself a dozen years hence, seated on the pinnacle of success. Then comes the commencement years, the starting period, when the eager young man bucks up against the stern realities of life. He is frequently dazed at the beginning. Somehow, either because his own dreams blinded him or because his educators failed to tell him, he failed to realize that there was such a cycle as making a start. He was groomed and trained for a nice place on the top rung of the ladder and had forgotten about bottom rungs.

It is said that middle-age sees man doing his best work and that old age sees man as either a success or a failure, according to the place which he had made for himself, but it is during the making-a-start period that destinies are most frequently shaped. It is in this cycle that the young man wills to climb the lower rungs or, lacking in determination, gives up. There are hundreds of young college graduates who are right now in the shoes of the young man with the broom. There are two roads open to them and one is easy, the other difficult. The line of least resistance is to hurl the broom down and walk out the door. The other is to stick upon the job and climb the first rung of the ladder.—The Lincoln Sunday Star.

BE A LIVE ONE

Hundreds of new students have enrolled in the university. They will take the course of live students or follow the path of "just" students.

Live students will keep up with the affairs of the school, will look for chances to help the university. They will subscribe to the Summer Nebraskan, the official publication of the summer session. Twenty-five cents gives you the paper for the entire six weeks of the second session.

The Summer Nebraskan is the students' paper. It is put out by students of the students.

There are openings on the paper for any students who wish to work, for any students who wish to serve their school. If the paper is to be made properly representative of all the students in the summer school, there must be a staff of reporters. Any students who wish to help on the paper should see the editor in the Daily Nebraskan office on the second floor of U-hall.

WHERE THEY ARE WHAT THEY DO

Lillian Hanson is now at her home at Wolbach, Nebr., after having attended the first session of the summer school.

Gertrude Moran paid a short visit to Lincoln recently.

Ruby Wolfander is a candidate on the non-partisan ticket for county superintendent of Hooker county.

Volta Torroy has returned to his home at Aurora after having attended the first session of the summer school. He will work for the newspaper there.

Y.M. MAINTAINS EMPLOYMENT OFFICE

University Men and Women May Secure Positions By Applying With Secretary

The University of Nebraska branch of the Y. M. C. A. maintains an employment bureau for the convenience of university students. Business men of Lincoln file there whenever they have part-time positions which can be filled by university students.

The Y. M. C. A. placed many men and women in positions during the first six weeks of school but with the start of the second sessions a number of new openings have appeared. A part of those placed during the first term have gone home and their positions now remain open.

University students should see "Bill" Day, secretary, in regard to finding part-time work. The employment service is free and students will find it an easy way to secure jobs.

Knox Burnett is traveling over Nebraska in the interests of the agricultural college which is conducting a campaign against barbary plants.
