STUDENT OVER-CONFIDENCE

Among the students of the University, among the followers of Nebraska football, but not among the members of the football squad, there is a feeling that Nebraska ought to be ashamed if she is even scored on this year. Such foolishness, one might go so far as to call it ignorance, as the persons making such statements disclose, deserves the ridicule of every sane person on the campus.

Nebraska is not confronted with a walk-away schedule. The Cornhuskers this year do not need to do more than see how high they can boost the totals. They have to work; they have to fight to win the first game and every game after that. To come through with a clean slate this year will be no easy matter and no thinking person can weigh the facts and assert that Notre Dame has no chance against Nebraska; that Syracuse is easy meat.

Not a team on the Huskers schedule is going to let Nebraska win. Not a team that meets Nebraska this year will believe that it has not a chance and a mighty good chance to beat the Cornhuskers.

True, Nebraska has a squad of experienced men. But so do most of the teams Nebraska is to meet. Syracuse has already defeated two strong teams, both by comfortable, early-season scores. Saturday Notre Dame almost swamped Kalamazoo, an ancient and a dangerous rival, Missouri, Kansas, Ames and Oklahoma are conspiring to take the Huskers down. They will not meet Nebraska with any less fight than has characterized them in the battles of years gone by.

South Dakota comes next Saturday. For two weeks before the Huskers donned the moleskins, the Coyotes were preparing for the football grind. In games of years ago, South Dakota has always fought to the last whistle. Not until the final second will either team be certain of victory on Nebraska field Saturday.

Cornhusker students and followers must beware of over-confidence. Remember the game of 1904 when Colorado came to Nebraska doomed for defeat and went home carrying the honors. Remember the fate which supposedly awaited Nebraska at Pittsburgh last year. Realize that Nebraska is as susceptible to a defeat from an "on paper" easy rival, as were the Panthers last year, and Nebraska at the hands of Colorado in 1904.

Over-confidence has been the ruin of many teams. Nebraska is no exception to the rule; its students and followers must realize the danger.

PURPOSE OF AMBASSADOR CLUB

He said he wouldn't take a million for it but he is giving it away every day. He is rich and the University is proud to have such men as he. He doesn't drive a flashy Stutz in the height of fashion but if you look about you can easily see him. Christmas time he packs his grip and drops down to his home town. They know him there because of the way he lavishes his wealth among them. He is a real Nebraskan who wouldn't sell the Nebraska Spirit for a million. The Ambassador's Club has for one of its purposes the expropriation of such a spirit in the high schools of Nebraska.

THE Y. M. C. A. AND Y. W. C. A.

University Men will be asked this week to join the University Y. M. C. A. University women will receive invitations to become members of the University Y. W. C. A. Membership in the Associations is based on interest and service. Students who are willing to subscribe to the principles of the Associations are welcome to become members.

The activities which these campus organizations represent are well known on the campus. They are vital factors in the life of the school. The invitation of new members does not come under the usual category of membership drives for large organizations. Students are not asked to sign the pledge cards and forget about them. They are asked to join the association thinking about what the associations mean. To do this it will be necessary to read over, even study carefully, the printed matter which outlines the principles upon which the organizations are based.

SCHOOL ACTIVITIES

One of last year's University graduates, in speaking of his four years at college, declared that he had gained almost as much through his active interest in the various school affairs as he had from his course of study. "If every freshman would start out with the idea of entering into as many school activities as he possibly can and if he would work faithfully in these various movements and organizations, then he would begin to receive the full benefits of his college life."

So often an upperclassman may be heard to bemoan the fact that he is not more active in campus affairs. He feels left out and wishes that he had started early to make for himself the name of an active and interested member of student body. It is sometimes hard to be sure, and when one is carrying a "stiff" course, it is not always as easy to enter into activities as one might desire. However, the advantages to be gained more than repay the student for time and energy spent. Friendships are formed, new lines of thought are developed and one's name becomes known to the students. And is there anyone who can resist this appeal of publicity of the right kind?

Professional Visitor. Ray—Did that young Doctor Anthony break off his engagement with you? May—Uh-huh! And he requested me to return all his presents. Then he sent me a bill for fifty visits.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Out of Sight. Wife—This is a marvelous climate! And isn't it delightful to get away from home and climb up here where no one can find us? Hubby—You bet it is, especially the bill collectors.—Elizabeth (N. J.) Journal.

Long Felt Want. Vic (munching apple)—Aesop said, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away." Herb—I wish I knew some fruit that would have the same effect on bill collectors.—"Topics of the Day" Films.

Headgear Trouble. Wife—I wish, dear, that you'd settle my last year's milliner bill. I really can't sleep thinking of it. Hub—Your conscience pricking you, eh? Wife—Oh, no but I need two more hats right away.—New York Star.

A Silencer. Mrs. Knott—Didn't your husband rave when you showed him the dressmaker's bill? Mrs. Spott—Rather; I showed him the milliner's statement and then he became simply speechless.—New Brunswick (N. J.) Home News.

Settling a Smile Bill. Bills are due. Not only are they due the first of the month, or thereabouts, but things bought should be paid for to complete the deals equitably. It is very easy for Mrs. Shopper to run up a charge account. And, when her husband receives a bill or statement at the end of the month, he makes a charge against her extravagance. Bills due come in greater
