CONTACT WITH PROFESSORS

People speak of a well-rounded education, meaning that the best educated person should not only be versed in social affairs.

Many a student goes into a class for a semester or a year, and if asked at the end of the course what he had received from the professor

Now if the mechanical regime of explanation is all that one gets, it might seem that we should soon come to the place where lectures would be given by means of radio.

No one, of course, would be satisfied with such a system; and the reason is simple—the personality of the professor is lacking.

We shall soon forget the few facts gained in a course, but the personality of the professor may linger with us for a life, and influence our futures infinitely more than a few mere facts.

After all, the professors of the universities represent the highest and best type of this civilization.

Class meetings commence this week! The seniors and freshmen have definitely announced their meetings for Tuesday and Thursday, respectively.

by having nearly two hundred present at their initial meeting. Which class will set the mark this year?

Why should we not have more class spirit at the University? It is true that the classes are scattered throughout the various colleges and fraternities, but that is all the more reason why the class meetings should be made the occasion for a display of class feeling and class interest.

It so happens that all the major elective offices in the University are at this time held by boys. Students should bear this in mind when nominating and voting for minor class officers.

Mr. and Mrs. Waters are driving to Chicago, Ann Arbor, Detroit and Buffalo for their wedding trip. They will live in Lincoln.

Miss Lois Drummond and Hugh Milner, former University students, were married at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at the First Christian church. The bride is a member of Alpha Xi Delta, and is a daughter of Dr. and Mrs. C. C. Drummond of Harla, India, where she lived during the early years of her life. Mr. Milner also attended the University. He is now with the Nebraska State Journal in the advertising department.

Miss Verna Bowden, a University student and is sorority sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Clarence Drummond, brother of the bride, was best man. Miss Eleanor Biercamp sang. Mr. and Mrs. Milner will live in Lincoln, after their return from a two weeks' trip in the east.

CHATTERBOX GETS A LETTER My Dear Miss Chatterbox: Being a person to whom all sorts of questions are asked and answers expected, I would like to add one more to your already overtaxed spindle. Then, too, being a person campus and collegewise, you are in a position to appreciate why such a question is put. This is the question: Be there a girl who does not expect her date to possess the filming qualities of Rodolf or who does not expect him to be able to hand out a line of the worldly things he's done, such, or is going to do, and see, or to know who played the lead in "The Loves of Pharaoh," or to describe the latest frock Gloria wore, or to tell the color of her eyes, or express your opinion of the long dress, or whether you are in favor of the carrying or not? Must a man pass these in order to be her possible escort to a party or movie?

In the various places of association with the fair ones those last weeks, at house dances, open houses, informal chats between classes or strolls to the library, one becomes dazed with the trend of the flow of college language, and silently says that the University should offer a course in "Current Conversation" in order for a guy to feel at home when he, by chance, gets a date with a really attractive "co-ed."

Of course, a fellow doesn't expect her to know who won the world series today, or why Carp got knocked for a row, but is it possible to—rather, is it considered good social form—to say something intelligent during the course of conversation? Surely, nobody wants to talk high-brow stuff all the time, and at the 55 per cent he made in Chemistry I, and that you are supposed to dance all cares away, but does a man have to wear his brain out trying to think up a wise crack to pull, so that he can chuck her under the chin and say, "I am the original boy?"

Of course many a fellow could date some of these Ph. D.'s or P. B. K.'s I guess I mean, but the really attractive girls, of course, appeal to us guys, and when you are fortunate enough to land a date, one sort of likes to know some of the social rules and regulations according to Hoyle.

This inquiry comes forth. Truly, —A "FROST" FROM THE STICKS.

Members of the student body have taken 2730 chances in the contest being conducted at the fountain pen corner of the Associated Students' store. Nineteen free trips to Pasadena for the California S. C. game were won yesterday. Thirty-nine tickets have been won so far and it is planned to charter a special train if one hundred winners are secured. The price of each ticket is determined by the number drawn and as soon as seventy tickets which compose one contest are sold the winning number is drawn. The minimum price of a ticket is one cent and the maximum 70 cents. Campus organizations are holding similar contests for their members.

One of the hopeful signs in the agriculture of California at the present time, is the increase in the enrollment of new students entering the college of agriculture at the university for the first time. The plan of the board of regents in inaugurating freshmen work in the branch of the college of agriculture at Davis, as well as at Berkeley, has resulted in an increase of 40 per cent over last year's enrollment of undergraduate students. Approximately 200 new students have entered the college at both Berkeley and Davis, according to statistics recently compiled. Of this number 150 are candidates for the degree of bachelor of science. About 110 have entered the baccalaureate curriculum at the University Term at Davis for the first time, while the number of graduates is 30.

and often surpasses such work as done by the finest stationery stores, the engraving and printing plant of the Associated Students' store is one of the finest in the west and possibly the finest in any university in the country, claims "Jim" Davis, manager of the Associated Students store. Recently moved from the old quarters in North hall, this department is now situated in the mezzanine floor of the Student union. Behind the stationery counter is a well-lighted room where there is a diamond point steel engraving machine of the latest type, a copper plated press and special facilities for making dies of every sort or short notice.

University of Washington, P. I. N. S.—The plans for organizing all unaffiliated students into house clubs have been completed and the work of securing and filling the houses is well under way. The clubs will be managed by their respective landladies for the present and later will be self-governing and will be given Greek letter names or not is immaterial, according to Herbert Little, president of the A. B. U. W. The object of this movement is to give to every student the benefit of group life.

University of California Dames will meet to organize a local chapter of the national organization of wives of university students and professors, at 2:30 o'clock today at the home of Mrs. Danner, 1771 Bushnell street. The original clubs was founded at Harvard University in 1896, with the object to "promote a feeling of friendliness, provide for social intercourse, and stimulate general culture among its members."—The Daily Californian.
