FRESHMAN INSIGNIA

It is the day of the Olympics and a party of husky freshmen are on the way to the place of combat. They have been the recipients of the old "razz" for weeks and today they are out to avenge themselves and to give glory to the Class of '26. As they walk along they pass by a pretty girl. She smiles and tries to show her good will and comradeship. She is also a freshman and she wants to be recognized as such by the young knights who are going forth to fight for her class. But alas she wears no green cap or other sign and the men pass by unheeding. She smiles wistfully; she wishes that she too might wear some noticeable insignia so that she might share some of this exuberant class spirit.

Meanwhile the men are also wishing that they might have the encouragement of the co-eds of their class. The world seems to be composed wholly of upperclassmen who offer no sympathy. They would like to see among the crowd some whose apparel marks them as comrades.

That brings us to the object of this article. We believe freshman girls should wear some sort of class insignia, something to distinguish them from the mass of co-eds. This custom would be extremely beneficial to all. It would increase the spirit of the class and make for more good feeling among the individuals of the class. This would in time result in a tradition that would be unique to our school and would be worthy of the wonderful spirit that we have developed.

Monday is the day to make your voluntary pledge for the Stadium. Be among the first.

You will be proud in the future that you were a Stadium Builder. Your pledge will help to pay the debt you owe Nebraska.

Campus Comment

Very worthy thoughts indeed, which one sophomore expressed in this column in the Tuesday issue. The writer contends that from the sophomore standpoint the freshmen standpoint was from the third-year view. This sophomore speaks of the hard battle which they as freshmen had in getting up to last year's Olympics. To this statement all of last year's sophomores who were present at the memorable program will agree. As the freshmen have started this year, so they started last. In the meetings of the Iron Sphinx last year much enthusiasm was aroused over the approaching Olympics and everything seemed lined up for a complete victory over the freshmen. However, when the day arrived and the two classes were lined up face to face, it was a pitiful sight to behold—a mass of green against a thin, straggly line of red.

Now is the time to arouse the necessary spirit among the red forces to alter this condition. Sophomores seek out your especially qualified men now and get them into competition so that you may have the best representing the class when the big event is pulled off. Get them into condition. Then get together a list of all sophomores and put a five committees out for personal interview with these men.

At the Olympics have roll call and then it might be advisable to have a special committee to take care of the delinquent members, such as the freshmen who are delinquent in the matter of green caps are now being cared for. Surely, men who lack the loyal class attitude should be made to feel that they are a detriment to the efforts of others toward the development of a real school spirit. Class rivalry respects the school body by classes. And organizations of this type can work wonders in the way of a great school spirit.

This should not be true of the men alone, for a good sized attendance at the Olympics would be an incentive for similar effort on the part of the entire student body. Come, sophomores, all men out for the Olympics! Follow the lead of your representatives, the Knights of the Iron Sphinx. Sophomores needed! Get behind the men who are to battle for you as well as for themselves that day and encourage them all to be there. You must be there too, to cheer them on. Yours for a real class fight and with best wishes for a victorious red army.

—An ex-Knight of the Iron Sphinx of '22.

MORE GREEN CAPS

A second shipment of the renowned Freshman headgear has arrived and is being distributed by Magee's. The arrival of the caps necessitates warning all freshmen who are not at present supplied with the scant grass-stained head pieces to secure them at once or undergo most severe consequences.

EVERYBODY'S MAIL

My Dear Miss Chatterbox: I just simply couldn't wait another minute to write. I must tell you how much I enjoy your chatter. I surely would like to know you personally, and I'll bet you ten to one that you are bashful. You can see by those clever remarks that I make a study of human nature.

There now, the preliminaries are over. Let us proceed with the proceedings. I had the most difficult time trying to decide what to ask you about. You undoubtedly realize the complex problems that arise in a large institution of learning such as this. Of course, I am taking a lot for granted. Well, let's go on.

I kinda hate to come to the point. You see, it's like this: I never had a chance to get in with people (still now) and tell them what I know. I think that's the trouble. The world doesn't know me yet.

I'm scared to death you'll laugh at my questions, but I have no other means by which to appease my curiosity. Dugout! This is my means. This is no question, but maybe you know where all the cookie-pushers and flappers hang out now-a-days? I never see any more near U hall, only twice a week when I go to Orpheum lab. Well, I have to get up in time to hear day break tomorrow, so I will close, etc. One of these days when I am not so compressed for time I will write you an intelligent letter which will put me before the eyes of the public.

Yours in respect,

FILIPINA POPOVER

TWO NEW COURSES FOR TRADE SCHOOL

Two new courses have been added in the trade school of the University of Nebraska, of which Prof. E. E. Brackett is principal. An eighteen-months' course in dairy manufacturing, including butter-making, cheese making, testing of dairy products, and ice cream making, given by the dairy department and a two-year course in mechanical drafting are the latest additions. About fifteen men can be accommodated in each course. Other departments in the trade school are: Carpentry and cabinet making, machine shop practice, practical electricity, poultry and automobile mechanics. Nearly all of the students in the trade school are ex-service men. Trade school men can take related academic work in connection with their practical work.

The last legislature appropriated $75,000 from which 10 per cent was deducted, leaving $67,500 for the establishing and equipping of the trade school. This school is open to any one who pays the $25 a month tuition. A considerable number of vocational students in the college of agriculture are taking the two-year course that trains men to manage farmers' co-operative grain elevators.
