McLean at Convocation.
The University is honored today by the visit of Dr. George McLean, chancellor of the University of Nebraska from 1895 to 1899. Dr. McLean has many friends in Lincoln. Every moment of his brief stay here is taken with meetings and social gatherings. The one opportunity which University students will have of hearing our visitor will be at convocation at 11 o'clock this morning. Dr. McLean was the chief executive of the University about a quarter of a century ago. A large audience should greet him when he brings his message to the students of today.

Debate.
"There are two opposite ways by which some men cut a figure in the world," wrote Washington Irving. "One is by talking faster than they think and the other is by holding their tongues and not talking at all."
Obviously a debater can not "cut a figure in the world" if the above really holds true. He cannot "hold his tongue" and talk at the same time. If he "talks faster than he thinks," as a debater he will shortly drop out of sight. There is no work in school or out that calls for more clearheadedness than the work of a debater.

The call has gone out for candidates for the inter-class teams. There are scores of students who need the training that this work offers. The tryout date has been set, November 23, plenty of time for an average student to work up his argument if he gets down to it right away. The question is the soldier bonus. Certainly a more vitally interesting topic for discussion could not be found.

There should be some strenuous competition for places on each class team. It does not matter whether a student has had much previous training or not. Here is the chance to get it. The 'varsity debaters are prepared to help any student who desires coaching and to coach the teams after they are selected. Don't say, "I never could talk in public, even if it would save my life." You probably could surprise yourself. TRY OUT FOR YOUR CLASS TEAM.

High School Publications.
Included among the Daily Nebraska exchanges are a number of newspapers published by the high schools in the state. These publications, most of them issued weekly or monthly, are of high standard, both in subject matter and make-up.

The place of journalistic training in the high school has until recently been a disputed one. High school publications are a late development. It has only been with comparatively recent years that school-men, as a whole have recognized the place of and real help which a high school paper can be in the promotion of the best interests of the school. Few high schools can afford any special instruction in newspaper-writing. But a number of plans have been worked out which make possible creditable high school publications.

The newspapers received at the Daily Nebraskan office show that the high schools are issuing high grade publications. Among the newspapers received in recent mails are those of the high schools at Arapahoe, Ainsworth, Cambridge, Doniphan, Fremont, Geneva, Hastings, Kearney, Lincoln, Milford, Newman Grove, Red Cloud, Ulysses and the Central, Technical, and South high schools at Omaha.

Judging from the publications of Nebraska high schools which come to this office competition will be keen for the awards offered by Sigma Delta Chi to the best high school publications.

This is the day to send that invitation to Dad inviting him to come to the University, November 18, for "Dads' Day".

It is only about thirty-six hours now before the Cornhusker special leaves for Kansas. Will you be on it?
