Exchange Professor Speaks to Students At Kansas School

That no nation can live unto itself and survive; that the United States, through the agency of the Great War which racked Europe, is coming out of its isolation young and vigorous; and that Europe and the world is looking to us for progress and real leadership, were the words of S. L. Joshi of Baroda College, India, to the student body of the University.
"K. U. men and women are called upon to realize this call of the world to them," said Mr. Joshi, "and I hope you will get the inspiration to acquit yourselves like men and women in the years of work to come."
Turning to the subject uppermost in mind, "The meeting ground of all the surviving streams of culture in the world is India," he said. "These are the Chinese, the Mohammedan, the Anglo-Saxon, and the Indian. The Chinese culture remained closed to us for a long time, but finally there was built on the shores of the river Indus a great civilization which has made its influence felt.—Daily Kansan.
