THE ONE INTEREST.

Overhadowing all other interests in the thoughts of the Cornhuskers is the Turkey day contest with Notre Dame. This is more than a passive interest. It is the interest of a student body awake to the importance of the result of the contest on the reputation of the University.

This interest should make it easy to enter wholeheartedly into the few minutes of singing at the opening of classes. It should make it easy to make the rally and torchlight parade such a demonstration of Nebraska spirit as has never been equalled. It should make it easy to cheer at the game.

Nebraska has the interest at heart. Now is the time for expression.

WOMEN AND GUNS.

The women are going to invade a field of activity which up until this year has been the exclusive privilege of the men at Nebraska. Rifle shooting has been added to the list of sports directed by the Women's Athletic Association. A committee has been at work for weeks preparing for this innovation and now, with the preliminary organization complete, this new sport is assured.

The co-operation and assistance of the officers of the Military department makes it possible for women to take up shooting. The officers have agreed to provide instructors and to arrange for hours when the women will be permitted to practice target shooting on the range.

Although an innovation at Nebraska, rifle shooting for women is an established activity at many colleges. Numerous letters were received by the Military department last year from leading colleges in the country, asking about the possibility of arranging competition with a Nebraska women's team. It is expected that if Nebraska develops a number of women experts this year matches can be arranged with these other schools.

The one difficulty encountered so far in arranging enough hours to accommodate all of the women who have signified their desire to take up shooting. There are any number who profess to have that steady nerve and sure aim needed to hit a target. They are eager to show their skill on the range. Countless others, though they have never handled a gun, think that under the instruction offered they can become adepts.

The present sharpshooters in the cadet regiments may expect to look to their laurels when these new enthusiasts begin to demonstrate their ability in handling guns.

Contemporary Opinion

People Expect It.

Although there are many people who laugh at college men and women, the majority of people expect a good deal of them. The public takes it almost as a matter of course that a man or woman "from college" is able to talk in public, write an intelligible and interesting article on something, conduct a meeting, and do other similar things that one ought to be able to do. Many students fail to realize the importance of these things until they bump up against the necessity of knowing how to do them. Then they wish they had paid some attention to developing these abilities while in school.

A man or woman may know facts and be able to think well, but unless he can get his ideas to other people, either in written or oral form, his influence will be limited indeed. As someone has said in a homely way, speak in public even passably well is the one who can gain the respect and confidence of others, sometimes in a degree that is unwarranted. Ability to express one's self works in these two ways, at least, to add materially to the influence the person will have, no matter where he may be.

College students go to enough meetings so that they should know how to conduct one, but no one needs to be reminded that a small fraction actually know the proper procedure. Nothing is much more disgusting than to see someone who should know better bungle a meeting and oftentimes defeat its purpose because the doesn't know how to conduct its business. It's embarrassing enough here, but it will be more so when these same people are expected to take the leadership of different groups after graduation.

Though all of these three things, public speaking, writing and parliamentary practice, anticipate a little natural ability along these lines, any one can get a working knowledge of them. The first two can be gained through certain regular courses, through literary societies, public speaking and journalistic activities, and by accepting chance opportunities to do one or the other of them as they come occasionally. Parliamentary rules can be learned by observing their use and practicing their application.

While a knowledge of these things is not required to graduate, it is nevertheless a factor in getting a person ahead in the game. Ability along these lines, even though it may not be outstanding, is an economic and social asset.—Iowa State Student.

VACATION.

There will be no Thanksgiving holidays this year. Thanksgiving day will be a holiday but students will be expected to attend classes on Friday as usual. This plan was adopted by the vote of the student body last year. No vacation now will mean a longer vacation at Christmas time.

It is not the time now to discuss whether or not the students will be fully efficient at classes on Friday after properly celebrating Thanksgiving. The students have willed that there shall be school on Friday. Therefore, everyone should attend classes.

U-NOTICE

(Notices of general interest will be printed in this column for two consecutive days. Copy should be in the Nebraskan office by five o'clock.)

Cadet Officers. All cadet officers report on the drill field not later than 5 p. m. Tuesday, November 28. Uniforms not required.

Hockey. Come out and play hockey! It's ideal weather for the game. W. A. A. has some shining new hockey clubs, so there will be enough to go around. Come out, play and get over that stuffed-up feeling. Here's a chance to make real friends, too.

THANKSGIVING EDITION. The Thanksgiving day edition of the Nebraskan will be distributed to regular subscribers at Station A in University hall after noon Thursday. Fraternity and sorority houses as well as out-of-town subscribers will receive the edition as usual.

The football edition Thursday will be the last edition until Tuesday morning, December 5. There will be no Wednesday paper this week.

Torches for the torchlight parade will be sold at the Notre Dame Rally Wednesday evening at 7 p. m., at the Armory. They are 10 cents apiece—three for 25 cents.

A special joint meeting of the Vikings, Iron Sphinx, Green Goblins, and Corncocks will be held Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the Social Science Auditorium. This is very important.

Penn State Band to Broadcast Concert

Hundreds of thousands of people in the eastern part of the United States will listen to selections rendered by the Penn State Band and Varsity Quartet, on next Friday and Saturday evenings. A musical program by the Penn State organizations will be broadcasted on Friday night from New York City to all radio stations east of the Mississippi river and on the following day the band will play before thousands of people assembled at the Polo Grounds for the Syracuse-Penn State game.

With the co-operation of the alumni of New York, definite arrangements have been completed to broadcast a concert of Penn State music from the powerful station of the American Telephone and Telegraph company in that city. The band will be introduced by a speaker who will briefly describe Penn State and its program for education.—Penn State Collegian.

Will Lead Cheers By Radio at Ohio

Cheer leading by wireless will be one of the features of the program for Ohio State Day, scheduled for Friday, December 8, according to plans now being made by the local alumni officials. John A. Creps '21, former Varsity cheer leader, will lead all of the alumni in a short cheering session via the radio telephone recently installed in Robinson Laboratory. He will first announce the cheer, and then at a given signal the alumni at the various meeting places over the country will cheer together. When "Carmen Ohio" is played by the band, the alumni will sing it.—Ohio State Lantern.

Columbia Professor Returns From China

Dr. Charles P. Berkey, professor of Geology in Columbia University, has returned to the United States after a long trip of scientific exploration in several countries. He was the leader of the Third Asiatic Expedition of the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Berkey announced that his party discovered in the center of the Gobi Desert of China the fossil of what is believed to be the oldest mammal known. The scientist was accompanied by six assistants, who, together with their excavations, were transported across the desert by five motor cars and seventy-five camels.—Columbia Spectator.

Indiana Band Will Make Extensive Tour

Advancing plans for the University concert band's two-week tour of cities in five states served as a counter-balance yesterday to disheartening decision not to send the 100-piece band to Lafayette, November 25, for the Indiana-Purdue game. Failure to find any source upon which to draw for the $350 or $400 fund that would make possible the band's trip to Purdue next week brought a stop to arrangements for the band to go with the student "special." "There is no money in the band treasury. It is against Conference rules to send a band to a football tilt on University funds. A popular subscription would not insure sufficient funds. In short, we see no way to get the band to Lafayette," Phillip Darling, '24, business manager of the band, said last night in summarizing the causes for dropping the project to show hosts of Purdue homecomers Indiana's band.

A more cheery announcement was made to University bandsmen when Manager Darling and Director Archie Warner outlined a program rapidly being developed for a two weeks' trip to cities in Indiana, Ohio, Wisconsin, Iowa and Illinois at spring vacation time in April. The trip is certain, although the list of cities at which the bandsmen will make a one night concert appearance just now is being formulated.—The Indiana Daily Student.

Swezey to Describe Craters on Moon in Observatory Tonight

"How the Craters on the Moon Are Accounted For," is the subject of Prof. G. D. Swezey for Tuesday evening, November 28, at the Observatory. The building will be open to the public from 7 until 10 o'clock in the evening if the sky is clear, for a view of the moon. The lecture is scheduled for 8 o'clock.

Journalism Head Visits Nebraska

Prof. Frank L. Snow, head of the Journalism and publicity work of the Oregon Agricultural College, visited the University Friday. He was formerly a professor at the Kansas Agricultural College.

Interesting Vesper Services on Tuesday

Mrs. Hattie Plum Williams will speak on "Social Service as a Vocation" at Vespers, 5 o'clock Tuesday in Ellen Smith Hall. This is the first of a series of vocational talks under the auspices of the W. S. G. A. The Vesper Choir will present the special music.

Vocational talks, for the benefit of University girls, have been planned by the Y. W. C. A. and the W. S. G. A. to take place at the regular Vesper hour at different times during the year. Announcement will be made concerning the remaining number of the series later.
