It is an honor to be appointed to a position of responsibility on the staff of the Cornhusker. It entails many hours of hard work without adequate recognition from those not connected with the staff.

The complete staff will be announced this week. Work has already begun on the big Year-Book. With the complete staff organized work will continue at a steady pace for months before the copy is complete for the spring issue.

Though the staff members are directly responsible for the finished product, almost every University student can contribute something to making the Cornhusker. It may be no more than having his picture taken promptly so that work on the annual will not be held up.

"Well I don't suppose we will hear of the Cornhuskers again until next fall." This was the remark generally heard after the Notre Dame game had been won and the football season had been brought to a victorious close.

In some ways this is a good thing. We could not long exist at the fever heat of those few days. Studies would suffer and we would be nervous wrecks. On the other hand this dying down of spirit is lamentable. Loyalty to a school should not need the stimulant of a contest.

"Why throw cold water on the skating rink," says one of the brilliant journalists when the announcement is made that the skating rink is not definitely assured.

There is an understanding at this school. It may be a rule, that if an instructor does not appear before ten minutes after the beginning of the class hour the students may leave. Yet at an 8 o'clock the other morning the class was still waiting when the instructor appeared at 8:30.

We heard the other day of a student who was elected to the Bridge and Club organization. Admittedly it is difficult to know what all of the organizations on the campus are but we had never heard of the Bridge and Club. Just so we could offer congratulations intelligently we looked for the announcement in the paper. He was a new member of Scabbard and Blade.

LYRIC—Following close on the heels of the University production of "East Is West" comes the First National picture of the same name at the Lyric. Constance Talmadge takes the leading role, with the part of Ming Toy. The costumes, music, and scent of joss sticks create the right atmosphere, and the acting is especially good.

he final scene in which Ming Toy is found to be white is a fitting climax to the play.

RIALTO—"The Ghost Breaker," featuring allace Reid, presents a novelty in the photoplay world. A mix up of ghosts, Spanish love and fortune, and Kentucky feud make an interesting plot, and Lila Lee as Maria Theresa, an Spanish heiress, is a fitting partner for the impetuous arren Jarvis—Walle, ghost breaker.

Story—Jarvis visits his grand mother in time to get mixed up in a feud caused by the shooting of one of the members of a rival family. He gets out of that territory as quickly as possible with his colored servant, Rusty Snow. Rusty Snow, by the way, is Walter Heirs, and you wouldn't know him with his black face and loud clothes. Jarvis lands in a hotel in New York, and there gets acquainted with Maria Theresa, a Spanish heiress, who has come to New York to get the map of her estate showing the spot where a treasure is supposed to be buried.

She succeeds in getting the map, but her cousin the Duke D'Alva wants it too. Jarvis, however, gets mixed up in the affair and is shipped over to Spain in a trunk. In Spain, fighting ghosts and going through haunted chambers brings many thrills. Rusty Snow keeps the crowd in a continuous uproar with his antics. It is a good picture full of humor and suspense.

COLONIAL—"Hurricane Gal" represents a romance of the sea. Most of the story takes place at sea and there are some wonderful scenes. A plane falls into the sea, a schooner is set on fire, a United States battleship appears, and there is a bloody fight on board ship. Every minute, it seems, there is a new thrill.

Story—Lola, played by Dorothy Phillips, is a smuggler because her father was. She has charge of two schooners left to her by her father, and she carries on his trade with a clear conscience. Steele O'Connor, played by Robert Ellis, is a secret service agent. He stows away on Lola's ship and nearly meets death there. He finds contraband goods on the ship, but he falls in love with Lola. The question is, which shall conquer—love or duty? Another complication is introduced when Lola finds that O'Connor is engaged to another girl. An abduction, a chase, and a thrilling fight follow. What is the result? Wait until you see.

mitted Monday afternoon, December 4, this matter will be decided, and plans will be discussed for this year's program.—The Oklahoma Daily.

The Christmas Tree committee today announced that the Kansas Friendship fund, raised by voluntary purchase of Christmas candles, will go for student relief in Russia, for relief of Russian student refugees in the cities of Central Europe, for students from Smyrna and Asia Minor whose universities have been entirely destroyed, and that a part of the fund will be kept for the University of Kansas Student Loan fund.

The percentage given for each of the three uses of the fund will be determined by the committee after the contributions have been made, based on the wishes of the purchasers of candles, who will be allowed to determine the use of their money by answering the following question: "Do you want your money to go for European student relief, Near East students relief, the Student Loan Fund, or all three, and what per cent to each."

"Reports have come to us from executives of the European Student Relief Federation, of which Conrad Hoffman is executive secretary, that the European countries helped last year by the Federation are improving, for self-help plans are working out successfully," said Melvin Griffin, manager of Christmas Tree plans, this morning, "but so far in Russia no self-help has been undertaken, since it was impossible to enter Russia last year on account of the opposition of the government. For this reason Russia needs our help more than any other country."—The University Daily Kansan.

For the first time in the history of western football, student of the University will be given the opportunity to choose an All-Pacific college eleven for themselves.

Believing that college students rather than sporting editors are qualified to make such a selection, the California Pictorial has formulated this plan which will allow each one who wishes, to elect an All-Pacific eleven according to his own ideas.

Ballots will be printed in the pages of tomorrow's Californian and first, second and third choice can be made for each position. The marked ballots will be collected at Sather Gate and the Daily Californian distributing table in the Student Union.

The results of the election will be published as soon as possible and picture of the man designated in this popular manner will appear in the first issue of the Pictorial next semester.

The earnest co-operation of the student body will be essential to the success of the undertaking, the idea being to make a fair selection of the best men on the Pacific Coast to play each position, and not necessarily a team composed entirely of the California Varsity. Certain members of the coaching staff to be designated later, will act as judges in the contest.—Daily Californian.

At the regular meeting of the Campus Radio club last night in Engineering annex, the committee on the proposed course in radio transmission reported that the electrical engineering department was ready to start the course at any time but difficulties in arranging class schedules and rooms would delay installation of the course until the spring quarter. This course would be one-quarter in length and receive two hours credit.

The committee on student operation of the college radio station reported that beginning next quarter any student who was properly qualified would be permitted to operate the college station if he complied with certain rules and passed an examination given by the electrical engineering department.—Iowa State Student.

J. Augustus Shuttleworth, class of '28, bewhiskered and smeared with mud walked wearily into the Gopher Hole and drew out his check book.

"Sign me up for two books," the old grad said, as he filled in the blank form.

"I've come a long way for these Gophers," he told Justin Hayes who was making out the subscription blank with some doubt as to the sincerity of the man. "I left Pasadena on Sunday, Nov. 5, the day after the Wisconsin-Minnesota game and I have been hiking and bumming my way on east-bound autos ever since."—Minnesota Daily.
