Traditional Iron Gates Will Be Used for Bulletin Board

The old iron fence is gone, but the gates are still in use.

Not however for the purpose for which they were originally intended. The gates, which have been placed on either side of the east steps of University hall, will serve as bulletin boards. And students of Nebraska will find University hall, once the entire University, the center of activities for the institution.

The silo in front of Administration hall will find its usefulness at an end. For the two iron gates will not only give the information so necessary to the students, but will also be an attraction because of the tradition so inseparable linked with them.

Alumni who objected on the ground of tradition to the removal of the old iron fence will be gratified to learn of this concession to the sentiment with which they remember the good old days when they were undergraduates.

Students now in school will learn to reverence the memory of those who built the University, making it what it is today not only to the originators of the school, but also to the students who have kept up the spirit of Nebraska, not only in sports, but in scholarship as well. And each time that the Nebraskan enters old University hall he will be again forcibly reminded of the heroes who went before and paved the way for the great institution which now holds such an important place in the activities of the state.

And in years to come, younger people will revere the gates—or bulletin boards—as symbols of the spirit which brought the first pioneers out of the east to settle in this land—to come to a life of rigor and hardship and eventually, out of their deep regard for the higher things of life and their desire to give their children and their children's children the best things which life could afford them, to found the great institution of learning which can help not only the individual, but the state as well.

For the old gates are again erected on the campus—but not for the purpose for which they were originally intended.

CONFERENCE CAGE RACE SLOWS DOWN

Missouri and Kansas Are Tied for Lead with Each Having Two Victories.

The Missouri Valley conference is rather quiet this week after a short early-season spurt which put Missouri and Kansas in the lead with a clean board. Each of the teams has played two games and emerged victoriously, giving them each the coveted 1,000 per cent.

Ames fell to the mid-way line when she met Kansas Monday night. Most of the valley squads are not counting yet, having suffered the ravages of the Tigers or the Jayhawkers although Kansas Aggies owe part of their misfortune to the Cornhuskers.

Nebraska will not be heard from this week in the Valley circle for there will be no game until January 18, when Drake and Nebraska will tangle at the Armory, in Nebraska's first home game. In the meantime Coach Frank will be removing blemishes, polishing up rough places and preparing the squad for a steady grind. After the battle with the Bulldogs Nebraska will be hitting a stiff pace and all the preliminaries that are learned now will enable them to play the brand of basketball that will give them a place near the top of the Valley column.

Boxing is being taken up by women at the University of Illinois. Classes will be held outdoors, unless the weather prohibits.

Stanford University Dismisses Athletes

Of ninety-one students dismissed from Stanford University for deficient scholarship, four are star Varsity athletes and five freshmen football players. Among them are Murray Cuddedack, fullback and place kicker of the football team; Charles Johnston, a tackle; Al Smith, a distance runner, and "Tarny" Hartranft, one of the greatest track athletes in the country.

Hartranft last year won both shot put and distance throw in the intercollegiate meet at Harvard, besides winning these events, in the meet with California. He also placed in the 100 yard dash.
