Three thousand nine hundred and seventy-one students had registered for the second semester up to noon Saturday—an increase of more than sixteen per cent over the figures of a year ago. With late registrations coming in rapidly, indications point to a record-breaking year for Nebraska. Altho 3,222 students registered in the second semester in the three-day period at the first of the year, statistics show that the second semester registration is always lower than that of the first term. A growing Nebraska U. needs a growing spirit and bigger appropriations if it is to keep pace with other institutions of its rank in the middle-west.

Inter-fraternity basketball is drawing crowds every afternoon to the Armory. Interest will increase as the finals draw near and the calibre of the playing grows better with the elimination of the weaker teams. The crying need of more room for intra-mural sports is keenly felt this week. Only a surprisingly small percentage of the student body is able to find a place to "work out". Legislators who are opposed to the appropriation for the new gymnasium are invited to look into the crowded conditions in the Armory.

A committee to investigate all University expenses for the past two years before any University appropriations are made for the next biennium has been appointed by the state House of Representatives in session at the capitol. Two Nebraska graduates are included among the five who have already started checking the accounts submitted by the financial secretary of the regents. Donald Gallagher, Law '21, of O'Neill and Chas. W. Yochum, '14, of Talmage are the two former students here. The other members of the committee are James Auten of Albion, Daniel Garber of Red Cloud and Chas. W. Orr of Lyons.

In view of the fact that the accounts submitted to the legislature this year are complete in almost every detail, a move is on foot at the capitol to discharge the special investigating committee which would ordinarily report the University appropriation bill for passage.

University alumni in the present legislature will be counted on to lead the fight against any attempt to injure the University by the cutting of appropriations which are vital to the expansion and maintenance of the Cornhusker institution.

Nothing helps a basketball team more than to know that the crowd is behind it! Nebraska students have a big opportunity to help our cage team on to victory in the home games. Rooters who are yelling all the time for the team, no matter which way the score stands, have a big share in the victory which is almost sure to come. Don't sit back and sigh and "crab" when the visiting team is ahead but think victory and yell for victory at every turn. Championships in football alone will not put Nebraska at the top in the athletic world. Organized cheering and singing at the games at the Armory should raise our percentage in the Valley conference race.

A New Staff Takes Control of Nebraskan

Don't blame the night editors for the editorials. Nor the reporters for proof-reading. Nor the editor for poor headlines.

A new staff takes charge of the Nebraskan with the printing of this edition. Help from the student body not only with subscriptions but with moral support is necessary to the successful publication of the "Rag". Constructive criticism is always welcome but learn to direct your criticism toward the right people on the staff.

Duties of the different staff members have been outlined by the Publication Board as follows:

The editor is responsible for the editorial column and the student opinions printed and to direct in a general way the policy of the paper.

The managing editor takes charge of securing the news and assigning the reporters as well as making "the dummy" for the issue.

The night editors write the headlines and are responsible for the proof-reading. Mechanical errors of make-up are charged to the night editors.

The associate editor edits the copy which is submitted by the reporters each day, correcting the English, punctuation, etc., and revising poorly written stories.

Suggestions for the improvement of the paper, criticism of the policies followed or opinions on campus affairs from students or faculty members are welcomed and will be given careful consideration. Such communications should be directed to the editor.
