A suggested slogan of the day is:
It's better to have studied than to have wished you had.

There are still about fifteen hundred students asking. Is the story about the blonde burglar true or did you publish it to fill up space?

Do not blame the Cornhusker management for getting the annual out too late in the year if you are an up-perclassman who has not yet been to Dole's to have your individual picture taken.

Action authorizing five new campus organizations, taken this week, brings back the old question of whether or not there are too many organizations. It is no reflection on the newly organized groups to say that there are too many weak and struggling societies constantly appealing for support.

Who would want the task of figuring out how long it would take one student to attend all the meetings of all the clubs, committees, brotherhoods, bands, and other groups in a single twenty-four-hour period.

If the same students are not spending their time in supporting the new organizations but if the new societies give an opportunity for some students to enter for the first time an extra-curriculum activity the new organizations will be welcomed as filling a needed position in our student life.

We have been figuring but we can imagine nothing worse than being selected as the one to be responsible for a skit on University Night. We predict that the position of censor will be more unpopular than that of chairman of a new "drive." Perhaps there will be a call for a mass meeting of all who are anxious to undertake the new job.

Nebraska University has suffered in past years considerably from false or inaccurate reports of its activities in the press. Misinterpretation or exaggeration of incidents in order to find material for "feature" stories seems to be a joy to some reporters.

Occurrences of little or no moment are often the ones which find their way into headlines in papers over the state. Unofficial publications are spread abroad as having the sanction of the authorities. Different remedies have been tried at other schools.

At present our institution has the plan of sending official University news thru a bureau to the papers of two or three cities but no provision is made for sending official news to the dozens of small towns from which come the majority of students registered here. These towns are the most interested in happenings at Nebraska and these towns are the ones most likely to misinterpret and misunderstand carelessly reported stories.

A news bureau was organized about two years ago at the University of Michigan by Sigma Delta Chi to correct this evil. The work has been carried on entirely by members of this student journalistic fraternity. The bureau was organized only temporarily until appropriations were made available for a permanent bureau for the proper circulation of University news—directly under the control of the Board of Regents.

Nebraska needs such a news bureau. Students could gather the news in which the people over the state would be interested but it would have a more official character if an official publicity director—a faculty member—would be placed the head of the bureau. "Home town" newspapers are willing and anxious to receive news of the students who have come to Lincoln and received honors in the classroom or in campus activities.

Dissemination of true news would undoubtedly be a big factor in correcting opinions concerning our school. An increased enrollment would not be too far in the future to be counted as a certain result of the establishment of the bureau.

Many Different Types of Students Found Resting on Stone Benches

We wonder how many persons daily sit on the old stone benches. We wonder what types of people spring their various lines while resting there. We have never had time to look into all these types but there are a few that are so common that they are known to everyone.

The person most often seen on the benches, especially in the warmer weather, is the flirtatious co-ed. The old benches afford an ideal place for her to await the attentions of the favored tea-hounds who walk up and down the walks "looking 'em over." Everybody passes these benches. That is, everybody that is anyone. On any afternoon you can take your pick of girls.

There is the movie girl who is sitting there waiting to be taken to an afternoon show by some susceptible man. Then, there is the hungry girl, who just craves to visit the Silver Moon, but thinks it a disgrace to appear there without having someone hanging on her arm. If some one asks her who she is waiting for, she will frankly reply that she is looking for a "check-grabber." There is the serious girl, who merely wishes to sit and talk. Lastly, there is the girl who is trying to inveigle some unsuspecting man into walking home with her, and spending a perfectly wonderful afternoon dancing. We are sorry to say, that so far, the girls of a certain sorority lead in this bench-warming, but, no doubt, this is because it is such a long walk home for them.

Next in number to the co-eds come the studious boys. They are seen in pairs, diligently comparing notes, regardless of the noise of giggles and chattering that is going on around them. They are seen in the coldest weather and between them and the co-eds, there exists a tued of long duration.

The co-eds claim that the students do not give a properly romantic setting for their game.

Such are those that use the old benches. A rather motley array, but perhaps representative. Anyway, the old stone benches seem to stand it, so the rest of us ought to be able to.

Vanity is the quality that makes a fat and awkward man feel righteous when he refrains from dancing.

Chicago—Dr. Williams S. Bovard, reported to the annual meeting of the board of Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal church here today that although there are 4,919,453 scholars enrolled in the schools of that church with an average attendance of 2,466, 246 the number of children in the United States as yet untouched by any form of education in religion total 69.3 per cent.

ORDERS RADIOS TO "PIPE DOWN" UNTIL S. O. S. IS CAUGHT

New York—For hundreds of miles around New York last night wireless instruments ashore and afloat were stilled by the magic signal "Q. R. T." broadcast by naval communications in a dramatic attempt to catch an "S. O. S." from the American freight steamer Winnebago in distress 500 miles west of France and somewhere north of the Azores. It was first believed the steamship was near the American coast but in the calm ensuing after the "Q. R. T." demand for silence it was learned that the call from the distressed vessel had been relayed across the Atlantic.

The "Q. R. T." signal means "pipe down" to radio operators afloat and "shut up" to land operators, cleared the air immediately, enabling communications to locate the call which had been given ship-to-ship relay until it reached this coast.

The situation clarified communications then flashed "S. O. S." clear and the air again was thick with the chatter of the radio.—The Lincoln Star.
