The Pastor says: As we dismantle our fortresses along the international borders, let us also cease to build forts and to plant cannons along the boundary lines that divide the classes.—John Andrew Holmes.

A glorious defeat was that won on the west coast yesterday afternoon by Nebraska's track team. Coach Schulte and his athletes deserve an immense amount of credit for the fine showing which they made against the best track team on this continent. Interest in the cinder path sport is greater at Nebraska now than at any time.

The work of Nebraska's team in California means that great things are to be expected from it during the remainder of this track season. It will come into competition with the finest track athletes of the country in the meets which have been scheduled for the coming month. The coaching ability of Coach Schulte should not and does not go unnoticed with each record of achievement of the tracksters.

Let every loyal Cornhusker student watch announcements so that he or she may be ready to welcome back to Lincoln our splendid team.

General Pershing's review of the cadet regiment Friday afternoon gave an excellent opportunity to see the progress which the R. O. T. C. has made this year.

Definite announcement has been made that an inspection of the Nebraska regiment will be made this spring by officials of the War Department with a view to deciding whether Nebraska should be raised to the top rank of University R. O. T. C. regiments. At present, about fifteen Universities have this first-class rating; the University of Missouri is the only institution in the Missouri Valley holding this honor.

Only by taking the place away from some school which is in this top class can Nebraska's unit receive the recognition toward which it is striving. Success in the enterprise would bring great honor to the University and deserved reward to the Military Department.

This week students have an opportunity to support Nebraska's debating team with the same fine spirit with which they have backed their athletic teams. One team debates Iowa here Thursday night while the other goes to South Dakota to contest there. The ability to be displayed Thursday is the result of more than a month of intensive training and of hard work which deserves support.

Admission to debates would be included in a single tax plan if adopted here and would overcome the difficulty of financing the interscholastic forensic contests. One of the fine features of the single tax idea is the boost which it would give to some worthy student activities which are now often neglected.

A dispatch from Omaha states that the Omaha Chamber of Commerce, while in accord with the present legislative program of cutting down state expenses, is opposed to any cut which will cripple education in Nebraska. The Chamber's executive committee went on record as favoring Governor Bryan's budget recommended for the University.

University students thought that the budget recommended by the governor made too big a cut in the appropriations asked by the Board of Regents. The amounts asked for the proposed gymnasium, museum and new lands for the Agricultural College were wiped out along with some minor sums for various activities. That a greater cut than this would be considered is not to be thought of by any true friend of the institution who has an opportunity to know its needs caused by the rapid growth of the past years.

HELP THE SOPHOMORES.

The most precarious time in a college career would be designated differently by difficult individuals. But many indications seem to be that the sophomore year is the time when one is least likely to achieve apparently that which should be accomplished. Too frequently college seems at that stage in the development not to afford the returns anticipated and discouragement is the result.

Scholarship, as the first consideration in a higher education, might well first be considered in relation to the sophomore. The statement is often made by upperclassmen, particularly seniors, that if they had received grades in their sophomore year such as they receive in their senior, there would not be a question about scholarship. Generalizations are dangerous and frequently misleading, still it is hard to refrain from making the general statement that the average student makes his lowest grades in his sophomore year. This may be partly due to the fact that he is fulfilling requirements and that some of the subjects are not of great interest to him. But is it not largely due to the lack of purpose which so often characterizes the sophomore year?

When one is a freshman one is interested in new life and new studies. The glitter stays. But by the second year this is often worn off and there is no definite aim in view to take its place as a motive force for effort.

In student activities the outlook is much the same. The freshman finds work and new friends entertaining. There are a number of rewards for work attainable, such as elections to organizations. The junior and senior if he wants to work has plenty of honors which are open to him. And whether the average campus worker admits it or not, it can hardly be doubted that the honors which the upper-classman may receive serve as an incentive to participation in activities. But in the sophomore year these are too far removed to serve as immediate goal for work and the routine work required seems often humdrum and unavailing.

We take it as a matter of course that we should provide every inducement to help the freshman to find his place in school life and make him desire to return to school, but we usually give little thought to our duty towards the sophomores. Upperclassmen do need to help the sophomores. A word of encouragement may help the second year student to adjust himself and find a reason why he should work for his college education.
