One month from today is High School Fete Day. Plans for the largest gathering of high school students in an affair of this kind are being worked out by a dozen or so organizations and committees. Athletes, editors, debaters, and many others will come to Lincoln to compete in contests arranged for the day. The importance of High School Fete Day is not realized by many. The problems discussed in the interests of high school activities are interesting and difficult. A plan to make the Fete Day program last two days will have to be worked out if the size of the gathering continues to increase as rapidly as it has during the past two or three years.

"Yourself," was the topic of a talk by Miss Helen Bennett at one of her vocational discussions with University women Tuesday. The discussion hinged around the following questions which are worth reprinting:

- Am I a leader or a follower?
- Am I original or imitative?
- Am I an active person or a static person?
- Am I a roamer or a stay-at-home?
- Am I a talker or am I silent?
- Am I interested in people, things, or ideas?

Miss Bennett stressed these questions in connection with the selection of a life occupation, but anyone, whether considering this problem or not, will do well to ask them of him or herself. Such an introspection will help anyone if combined with enough will power to carry out changes in oneself which will lead to improvement.

If some of the spring weather which we are having this week had come before vacation, the baseball team would be more ready to meet the Missouri Tigers in a pair of games scheduled for Friday and Saturday of this week. In spite of the short time, which the new coach has had in which to round his players into shape, Cornhusker students who have been watching the Varsity candidates since their return from Oklahoma, predict that the team may be expected to put up a stiff battle against any colleg e team in the Valley.

The freshman baseball men have practiced long enough to convince their coach that mighty promising material may be found in their ranks. The Varsity next year will undoubtedly profit from additions from the first-year team. An inter-fraternity meet is scheduled for this spring. If the experience of similar meets in track and basketball proves true, the Varsity coaches will do well to look for new material among the players in these games.

How many times have you been called on to make a few remarks unexpectedly before a gathering of people and, after you have finished, felt yourself to be a miserable failure?

How many times have you been in a group of people conversing about various things when you were well informed on just these subjects but were nevertheless hesitant in breaking into the conversation? Do you, as the advertisement of the firm which creates after-dinner speakers, and conversationalists asks, ever "feel alone in a crowd."

The power over the English language, coupled with the ability and confidence of verbal expression of that language, constitutes an important characteristic in an individual's personality. A fluent, forceful, informed speaker will never cease to command admiration.

Many professors advocate a compulsory course in public speaking in colleges. And when one thinks of it is it not practical? What man, in any business or profession, does not at some time thank his ability to express himself or deary his inability?

Training in public speaking is not compulsory here; nevertheless it is offered, and time spent in taking such courses is not wasted.

Another thing: when you get a chance to get on your feet to say a word or two, don't pass it up. If only at your fraternity meeting, try to develop a forceful style of expression. You will appreciate it later.—Ohio State Lantern.
