The Pastor Says: It is more expedient to combat the ideas of men than to contradict their phrases.—John Andrew Holm, S.

The movement to keep the campus beautiful has received a boost in the action taken to lay sidewalks in some places where well-worn paths made the lawn unsightly. In practically all cases where these paths were worn, sidewalks have been needed for a long time. Short "cuts" are permissible if provision is made for them. The result of the laying of the sidewalks will be that the "Keep off the Grass" slogan will be more popular and will have a united student support—a support which will not countenance violations.

After a suspension of publication due to lack of student support, the Minnesota Daily is again being published. Resumption was made possible only after a blanket fee of $2.00 a year had been levied, making every student registered in the University of Minnesota a subscriber. Minnesota is probably the largest University in the middlewest to adopt this form of the single tax.

The cause of the suspension of publication was that the students would not subscribe in large enough numbers to make the paper a financial success. In the terms of our-campus talk, the students were "Rag pickers." That they wanted the paper is shown by the petitions they circulated to have it revived, by the way in which the overwhelming majority agreed to the blanket tax. At Nebraska as at Minnesota every student who reads the college paper regularly without subscribing for it is weakening the power of the paper to give efficient service and is showing a very low grade of college spirit.

The Minnesota paper was criticised because it was not all-university in its scope. The Daily Nebraskan was once criticised by someone who said that anyone could get a notice in it merely by taking it to the office. The criticism was justified and was taken as a compliment by the staff. For the Nebraskan tries to represent the University in all its activities; to make it possible for everyone on the faculty or in the student body to have access to its columns for any story of general interest with a minimum of trouble.

One small staff cannot "cover" all the news of so large a University as this, and the editor of the revived Minnesota Daily has the support of all college editorial staffs when he declares in his opening issue that student co-operation is necessary for a representative paper. Minnesota has taken a fine step in making the college paper more influential by levying a blanket tax on every student for subscription to the student daily. A Daily Official Bulletin, containing notices for which every student is held responsible by the administration and faculty, is printed in the daily, thus justifying the compulsory tax.

"Go To College" teams have been organized at several colleges this spring. The teams are made up of three or four University students who visit the high schools of the community in which the college is located and tell the prep students the advantages offered by a college education. The particular advantages of the college or University from which the team comes are also laid before the high school students.

The "Go to College" teams have proved popular and the high schools visited are asking for return visits. Nebraska has urged that individual students take upon themselves the responsibility of telling to "home folks" the advantages furnished by the University of Nebraska. But the organized teams of students accomplish more because of their preparation and concentration upon the question for days at a time during their trip.

In the Nebraska spelling test recently conducted by the University Extension division among 274 high schools, four Nebraska colleges and the University of Nebraska, the highest average—98.66—was made by the seniors in the colleges and the lowest—89—by freshmen in the high schools. The highest class average—94.7—was made by the colleges while the University students averaged 94.4. High school students averaged 86.27 which, according to the report, is from 4 to 6 per cent below national average.

"The Red Cross in Iowa," by Dr. E. S. Fullbrook, professor of Economics, has just been published. In two volumes, by the State Historical Society as part of the Iowa chronicles of the World War. It gives, in general, the part Iowa took in carrying through the Red Cross movement in relation to the war. In an earlier study, Professor Fullbrook had investigated the accomplishments of the Sanitary Committee during the Civil War. He points out, what is commonly not recognized, that many of the activities of the Red Cross were undertaken by the Sanitary Commission in the earlier conflict.

Agriculture Students are Laying Plans for Annual Farmers' Fair

There has been much speculation this week as to the nature of the new order on the campus. It was only Tuesday that it became apparent that this new order had been formed. Some said that it must be another "eat-more-corn" club. Others ventured that it was an agricultural bloc that had escaped captivity. Several who remembered the strenuous days of last fall even thought that another tag-day was taking place on O street and dared not venture on that thoroughfare fearing that they too might be asked to join the order.

Finally one of the less timid got close enough to read one of the tags which was of the shape and color of an ear of corn. On it he read "May 5?" Thinking that a question mark without a question was superfluous he asked the wearer what it all meant. Then the sturdy Cornhusker from Ag College squared his shoulders, looked his interrogator straight in the eye, and proudly replied: "Farmers' Fair, you'll be there."
