The faculty of the College of Liberal Arts of the University has adopted the following statement, "The Purpose of a College Course:

The College course should be directed to the following ends:

1. To awaken the student to the problems of the personal and civic life of his own day.
2. To develop in him, with relation to these problems, something both of the historical sense and of the scientific spirit; an understanding of the origins of present conditions, and a spirit of fearless, disinterested, critical thought in analysis of these conditions.
3. Since the college course is to be regarded not as the end but as almost the beginning of a lifelong process or orientation in the world of men and ideas, to equip the student with such tools, in mastery of his native tongue, and in serviceable acquaintance with other tongues, and to cultivate in him such tastes for literature and the other arts, as shall make his citizenship in the world both effective and profitable.
4. To give training in some specific field, that the student may become immediately useful to society.

A national fraternity convention will be held on our campus this week. Alpha Gamma Rho national officers and delegates from twenty chapters will be guests of the local chapter for three days beginning Thursday. Nebraska students welcome as their guests also these representatives of the agricultural fraternity.

Never before has the national convention of a Greek letter fraternity been held on our campus. When the delegates witness the ground-breaking ceremonies for the new Memorial Stadium on Thursday morning, may they see in the exercises the beginning of a bigger day and an ever-widening future for Nebraska. May they carry back to their schools the word that Nebraska—a growing Nebraska—greeted them and holds wide open its door of hospitality to their students at all times.

The coming of this national fraternity convention should only be the start to the gathering of other conventions here.

The aim of the military department to send a strong delegation of R. O. T. C. men to the summer camp at Fort Snelling from Nebraska is a worthy one. The cadets plan to take first honors and are starting their preparations already.

Nebraska's representatives at the camp last summer made a fine showing and did much to advertise real Nebraska spirit among students from other colleges of this part of the country. With a slower start they took second honors for the summer's work; this year they should be able to pass the delegation from Missouri and add another trophy to Nebraska's collection.

The benefits of the summer at camp need hardly be mentioned before their worth is recognized. The pick of the military departments is scheduled to benefit from the fine training offered at Snelling by competent and well-trained officers.

Just as the small boy in the grades looks up to the high school youth and imitates, just as the shop girl looks up to the society girl and imitates—so does the college student worship his heroes.

Imitating qualities of others is to be encouraged when these qualities are for the good of the imitator and when the process of imitation does not destroy the sense of originality. Custom, habit, and tradition must have a source. Their spread is accomplished by one individual copying another.

Who are the heroes we worship? They may be men who have gone before us into the work which we ourselves have chosen and in which we have succeeded. They may be men with whom we associate in our everyday life.

The freshman may worship the athlete, the man whose name and picture he sees so often in the daily newspaper. If he can so much as draw a glance from his hero, he is awed.

And imitation! Every mannerism habit, whether good or bad; every mode of dress, has an imitator. Fraternities are very much the same as individuals in hero worship. Personality is too often forgotten in view of some accomplishment or particular ability of a prospective member.

Are you copying somebody? Is somebody copying you? If the former, see that the individual is one who merits imitation. Do not sacrifice your own initiative. If the latter, mold your habits, and personality so that your imitator will not be wasting his attention.—Ohio State Lantern.

SENIOR GIRLS HAVE SCHOLARSHIP PRIZE

American Association of University Women Creates New Scholarship Award.

Announcement of the creation of a $50 scholarship prize for senior girls was made by the Lincoln branch of the American Association of University Women Saturday afternoon. Members of the present junior class are eligible for application. Blanks and information may be secured from Miss Amanda Heppner, Dean of Women.

The association entertained the women of the senior class at a tea at Ellen Smith Hall. A one-act play was presented by the Mummies' Club of Lincoln high school. Mrs. Deutsch reported a joint meeting with the Omaha branch of the Association.

The Association awards annually a $100 prize and a $50 prize to sophomore and junior girls in addition to the one announced Saturday. Fifty dollars has also been given to the Women's Colleges in the Orient this year.

The general requirements follow: An applicant must have been and be wholly or in part self supporting. An applicant must be a regularly enrolled student in the University of Nebraska. She must be in good standing at the time of her application.

An applicant must have a high scholarship, and must have some interest in general college activities.

Every applicant must fill out one of the regular application blanks which may be obtained from the Dean of Women, or from the chairman of the scholarship committee, Miss Gertrude Jones, 2427 P street, Lincoln.

Every applicant must furnish five references. Three of these should be from persons on the campus; the other two from persons not connected with the University. The Dean of Women will always be used as a reference so her name should not be given. The applicant will make arrangements with the persons whose names are given to send their recommendations to Miss Gertrude Jones, 2427 P street, Lincoln, Nebraska. Applications will not be considered by the committee unless this request is complied with.
