Nebraska Plans to Trim Tigers
in Contest for Honors at
R. O. T. C. Summer
Camp.

ATHLETICS ARE FEATURED

Morning Hours Are Turned Over to Instruction of Military Sciences and Tactics.

The selection of Fort Snelling, Minnesota, for the summer camp has proven so satisfactory heretofore that it has been again designated for the Seventh Corps Area Reserve Officers' Training Units. Those who are going to attend for their second and third camp will be pleased at this announcement for it means a good time—lots of fun and frolic—along with serious, hard, work. Those who are attending for the first time should look forward to the period June 14-July 25 with a great deal of anticipation, for a very interesting and instructive camp will be their experience.

Minnesota in many ways occupies an enviable place among the states of the Union. It is a state of wonderful roads, perhaps the finest system in the country today; it is the state of "ten thousand lakes", beautifully carved by nature; it is a region of gentle swells and slopes; it is one of the foremost farming states, farms that are modern and up-to-date in every respect. The weather is delightful during the spring and summer. It is rarely so hot as to be uncomfortable. The entire state is virtually a summer resort. During the warm weather Minnesota is visited by hundreds of thousands of visitors seeking such pleasures as boating, swimming and fishing.

Fort Snelling lies at the confluence of the Minnesota and Mississippi rivers, half way between St. Paul and Minneapolis, about six miles from each city; a splendid six-minute car service passes through the post. There are numerous lakes accessible by street car from Snelling where the cadets will be able to enjoy swimming and boating every Wednesday afternoon, Saturday afternoon, and all day Sunday. St. Paul and Minneapolis have a population of approximately 280,000 and 400,000 respectively.

"The Purpose"
The object of the R. O. T. C. Camp is to develop and encourage patriotism, 100 per cent Americanism, to impress upon the young man the obligation and duties of citizenship, to improve the physical well being, to foster a national spirit, and to provide the masses, when called to the defense of their country, with trained, efficient leaders.

Cornhusker Slogan "Beat Missouri"
Last year Missouri was by far Nebraska's strongest competitor and this year another hard fight can be expected. Missouri is the only school in this section with "Distinguished Rating" and to be beaten by a school without this rating would not only hurt her prestige and threaten her apparent superiority in military science and tactics but would perhaps endanger her chances for the rating next year; so Missouri will be keenly alert from the very beginning, and fighting not only to retain her laurels but to add to them. The spirit of the Cornhuskers, however, has been proven many, many times, to be of the "never say die" brand and if this spirit asserts itself as it has in past camps, a very interesting fight for honors can be looked forward to with information to a great many of the student body to know that the Nebraska R. O. T. C. Camp group was considered the second best all-round group in the corps last year.

The Training Schedule.
The camp opens Thursday, June 14, as far as practicable college groups will be kept intact, that is, complete units, such as platoons, and companies formed from them. There will probably be no regular work scheduled before the following Monday; the interim being to organizing the platoons and companies, issuing of equipment and the inoculation of those requiring same.

The training will be a continuation of that received at the institution, practicing and demonstrating outdoors the theoretical instruction received in the class room. The mornings will be devoted to military subjects, such as rifle marksmanship, pistol marksmanship, minor tactics, offensive-defensive tactics applied to the platoon, musketry, infantry drill, interior, economy, sanitation, bayonet, stokes mortar, one pounder and machine gun.

Grading
Cadets will be tested on the completion of each of the above subjects. The percentage of the platoon or college group that qualifies for the highest rating will add so many points to the record of the platoon or college, the percentage qualifying in the next highest rating so many more and the percentage that fails will subtract so many points from the record. It is obvious, therefore, that the record of the individual not only affects his own standing among the other cadets but will likewise affect his platoon and college standing. The three fold effect of the individuals work tends to stimulate him to do good work, if not for himself, at least for his platoon and most important of all, for his college. Repeatedly students have remarked at the end of the camps that they entered feeling they possessed a roper conception of loyalty or school spirit for their institution but that they were leaving conscious that loyalty to any institution, organization or cause meant a great deal more than they had imagined. Unless a student unconsciously consults the interest of the institution at all times, that is, merges his own identity and interest into that of the larger body, and willingly makes personal sacrifices when sacrifices are required, both in time and effort, that student regardless of his "feelings" hasn't school spirit. It is interesting to watch the change gradually taking place in the attitude of the cadet towards the interest of the school. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred this feeling is transformed from an intangible, vague something into a clear, definite idea and it is the common experience to find the student, before half the camp has been completed, consulting the group interest and doing all in his power regardless of the extra time and effort required, to boost the standing of his platoon and college, particularly the latter.

Athletics
As stated above, during the morning hours the cadet will receive instruction in military science and tactics. The afternoons will be turned over to the instructors in charge of athletics. Baseball teams will be organized by each platoon, company and college. Platoon, company and college leagues will be formed and the winners of each presented with appropriate prizes. There will also be swimming, boxing and wrestling classes, tennis tournaments for both singles and doubles and an inter-collegiate track meet towards the end of the camp. A track meet will also be arranged with the troops at Fort Snelling. A boxing and wrestling tournament will be held to determine the champion of each weight, the winners receiving prizes. The various prizes will be furnished by different organizations in St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Entertainments
Major Erickson has been notified that he will have charge of this phase of camp life. There will be a weekly dance for all R. O. T. C. students; sightseeing trips and week-end camping parties to the various lakes are also being planned. In addition, dances will be given by various organizations in the Twin Cities, one of which will probably be a boat dance. The Nebraska alumni of St. Paul and Minneapolis are planning several entertainments for the cadets of this institution. A novelty in the way of entertainments will be initiated for the first time at the coming camp.

Each college group will have set aside, some time during the camp, a night for providing musical and dramatic entertainment for the rest of the camp. This night will be designated "Nebraska Night", "Missouri Night", etc. This is a new feature and will no doubt provide a good deal of amusement for all.

The Nebraska cadets are going up determined not only to obtain all the mental, social and physical benefits to be derived from the camp, but to maintain the high standard set by former graduates, to increase Nebraska's prestige and influence among the leading institutions of this section and to uphold Nebraska's reputation for manly, clean sportsmanship.
