A CORNHUSKER VICTORY.

Nebraska's memorial stadium saw its first football game yesterday, and that game was a victory. Anyone seeing Oklahoma's advances to the goal with definite precision, to be stopped by sheer grit would certainly agree with those who conferred the title of "Fighting Cornhuskers" upon Nebraska's team.

The ponderous stadium, quite in contrast to the wiry and swift players, started on a career that will probably terminate many years after the men who saw that game today are dead. The great masses of steel and concrete existed in such firm stolidity and such great proportions that rooters were awed by the strangeness and immensity of everything.

It was well along toward the first half of the game before students began to allow their voices to echo in the balcony on the opposite side. Then there was a steady cheer for Nebraska.

The Cornhuskers won a clean and decisive victory. There was scarcely a moment of the game that did not show Nebraska superiority.

However, even though Nebraska won today, there is a heavy schedule ahead. Notre Dame, Syracuse, Kansas, Missouri, and the Kansas Aggies must be met. The Oklahoma game was a hard game but there are others coming.

CAMPUS OF DISSENSION.

As has been pointed out time after time on this campus, there is need for co-operation, or rather coordination. At the mention of any event to take place, the first move on the part of a dozen or more organizations is to take charge either through self appointment or by assuming leadership.

That is appreciated, but when organizations begin to quarrel over who is who on the campus, then, there is need for radical reform.

A man belonging to an important organization on the campus recently stated that his organization was taking dictation from no one. That is a fine attitude to take. It is an attitude that will put Nebraska in the column of the indifferent rather than one of those leading universities that commands admiration for the wonderful spirit displayed.

There is not an organization on the campus that has not dedicated itself to a greater Nebraska. If it has not, then it would better never use its name in connection with that of the University of Nebraska.

This is your institution. You need it and it grows with your greater efforts. Think of Nebraska as a great solid unit and not a number of segregated elements carrying the same charge and repulsing one another.

WHAT WE NEED.

It is well known on the University of Nebraska campus that there is need for new buildings, new improvements, and better facilities to meet the increasing difficulties arising from increased enrollment.

Among the first things needed, a new museum must be granted the place of honor. In that old building now called a museum, there is one of the finest collections in the middle west. Professor Barbour and his assistants have put an unbelievable amount of labor into making the displays as comprehensive as possible and they have succeeded with a measure of success that bears the tone of supreme artistry.

However, to keep up the high standard by which the museum is known, there must be more floor room. There is not enough space to display many of the important pieces and there is a loss being suffered through lack of that very thing.

A new museum will come some day. In the meantime, the museum at the University of Nebraska will continue to grow, even though there is a great necessity for more room. Greater and greater collections will be made until this University shall gain honor through its museum.

MACBETH ON SCHOOL LIFE.
To all of us in general: "There are a crew of wretched souls."

To the freshmen: "What are these so withered and so wild in their attire that look not like inhabitants of the earth and yet are on it."

To the first up in any frat house: "Why do you dress me in borrowed robes?"

To those late to 8 o'clock classes: "Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed that you did lie so late?" (Faith, we were carousing.)

To the students' pocketbooks: "Naught had—all's spent."

To the recipients of flunks: "Let us seek out some desolate shade and there weep our sad bosoms empty."

He to him: Will you buy an S. A. ticket?

Him to he: Naw, but I'll rent a button for two bits.

Yesterday, we read of the ceriour michap which occurred to your machine. One reader suggested that this plausible ccheme might be used. In the place of the miccing letter between r and t why not use the letter c for one cound, z for another cound and ch for the other; az haz been done herein? We hope this will prevent a repetition of the lact tragedy, which cauc come of your readere to contract either the cattering habit or the abominable Hcp.

Johnny: Mother, do I have to wash my face?

Mother: Certainly, dear.

Johnny: Aw, why can't I just powder it like you do yours?

First Attorney: Your honor, unfortunately, I am opposed by an unmitigated scoundrel.

Second Attorney: My learned friend is such a notorious liar—

Judge (sharply): The counsel will kindly confine their remarks to such matters as are in dispute.

We heard on good authority the other day that the next Biology building will not be called Bessey hall after Dr. Bessey, but will be named after Dr. Pool. Do you get it? Say it over to yourself two or three times—concentrate.

The real tragedy is not that so many people go to hell, but that so many would feel at home nowhere else.

In the College World

Mr. Sidney M. Collins, a former University student, graduate of law at the University of Nebraska, and prominent in athletic and juvenile court work, was married to Miss Mary Young Evans of Berwick, Penn. at Lewistown, Montana on September 29. Mrs. Collins is a graduate of the University of Syracuse and is well known as a dramatic reader and coach of amateur plays. After teaching and coaching athletics at the Nebraska Military Academy, Mr. Collins is now engaged in ranching near Billings, Montana.

"Three in one," seems to be the motto of many students in some of the small class rooms. It does not refer to shoe polish, sewing machine oil, or dessert but to the senior class. As many as three once dignified seniors have been seen perched on one chair. How they manage to do it will not be accounted for in this article, but it is certain that the dignity which they traditionally lay claim to is thereby lost.

Upon investigation, it appears that this unseemly condition into which the here-to-fore impressive and dignified seniors have fallen, is owing to the monopoly of chairs by the underclassmen. Whether it is the greater agility of the freshmen and sophomores or the greediness of their appetites for knowledge that enables them to reach the class rooms before their superiors, cannot be told; but certain it is that if dignity is to be preserved as a respected quality, the underclassmen must restrain their ardor, or the law of Senior Superiority will descend upon them.

Ohio state students are now offered four-years' religious curriculum by the Student Social Center. The plan is unique in that it has been tried in only two schools in the country. The object of the course is to correlate religious teachings with work done in regular University classes. Students are grouped at the social center according to their class standing on the campus.

35 Sophomore Cops of the University of Colorado dipped 14 unruly Freshman in the Varsity Pond last week, after investigation made by Moot Court most of the Freshmen were found guilty of breaking all the rules which are recorded in the Bible. In addition to the cold bath the Frosh will receive more punishment.

Next time you are hungry try a U. of N. sundae. Imagine a couple of kinds of ice cream, ice and lots of crushed fruit and you will know what this perfectly delicious sundae is. If you are fond of chocolate you will like the Egyptian Bonbon. Besides these you will find a complete luncheonette and fountain service at Rector's Pharmacy.

When you have your hair marcelled of course you want an expert. You can get an unusually soft, natural wave if you just go to Helen Mueller at the Vogue Beaute Shop.

When I was in Tucker-Shean's I found so many things I hardly know where to begin. They have the best looking stationery. It is sure to strike the fancy of particular coeds and fraternity men. Then they have a great variety of appropriate party gifts and prizes, as well as an attractive line of fraternity jewelry. There are note-books and school supplies galore. In fact a student will find at Tucker-Shean's Jewelry and Stationery Store practically every class-room and social need. You can't miss it as it is on O street between the two 10 cents stores.

Home sewing is being featured by Gold's this week. They are displaying all sorts of dress goods and trimmings. Their line of silk and wool materials show some unusual values. They are selling satins, tafetas, and crepe de chines at $1.98 a yard. I have picked out a cocoon silk duvetyne at $3.50 a yard for my next dress. It is just the best looking stuff I ever saw. Besides they have some lovely imported chiffon velvets and it is none to early to begin thinking of formal dresses. Then they have ever so many fancy braid bindings and medallions of embroidery or beads to combine with their material.

This cold weather has made us all think about coats. Ben Simon & Sons have any number of pretty ones. They have most attractive sport coats in the new hyllo cloth, both with fur collars and without. One that caught my eye was of antelope with a red fox collar. When you see it, you will want one I know. They have a wonderful line of fur and fur-trimmed coats, too, that you should see.

The "Newstone"

The Newest Young Men's Style from England—"A Step Ahead of the Parade"

The Newstone is the last word from England—it strikes a new note in college men's styles that's a bit in advance of everything else.

Low waisted—two buttons set low, broad shoulders and no vent—short vest and full trousers—that briefly describes the Newstone, but you will get a far better idea of its splendid style if you'll stop in and try it on.
