STUDENT ACTIVITIES

What an important part student activities have in one's education is often overlooked until after graduation. During school days and afterwards, those who enter into activities of the group are being of service to others and at the same time are gaining a valuable part of their own education.

Ability to get along with people and to mingle with those of every degree of education and of every social standing is gained. The person entering into campus activities acquires an attitude toward life and an ability in dealing with persons that will always be an advantage.

A student who does take part in athletics, clubs, and any other activities cannot be selfish or aristocratic. He learns that to be truly educated is to have a well-rounded knowledge and to use this in the service of others.

It is important too for a student to choose early in his first year of college life lines of school activities in which he is especially interested so as to get into them at once. One must have initiative and perseverance to stay with his chosen line of work to make his ability count.

SNOBS

The student body is composed of individuals who represent the greatest diversity of character and purpose. The aims and ends of no two are exactly alike but, as the freedom of choice is theirs, no comment may be made upon it. But there is one class of students that could well be eliminated—if it were a question of elimination. That class is the species known as snobs.

Snobs are those individuals who go about all swelled up with such grand egoism that it fairly radiates from them. They spell "Me" with capitals, and they mean to make an impression by means of their fancied superiority. Either they have not yet been enlightened on some subjects or else the enlightenment has been unable to penetrate.

They may well be reminded that Nebraska claims to be a democratic institution and that snobbishness is not a factor in its makeup. Moreover, they should know that any student here is considered just as good as his fellow student, and those who desire to perpetuate any notions to the contrary are a disturbing element on Nebraska's campus.

It is interesting to notice that rarely are any of the persons who are well known for their activity and leadership in school afflicted with self-conceit. Altruistic motives which prompt such endeavor are not those corrupted by personal vanity nor fed upon the desire for distinction for its own sake.

Democracy implies broad-mindedness. Its contradictory suggests the opposite which, in turn, savors of ignorance. In this land where equality is considered every man's birthright and men are taught to judge as they would be judged, there is no room for the egotist known as a snob.

WHAT ARE YOUR MOTIVES?

You come here to study, presumably. You are given arbitrary hours and arbitrary credit. In that artificial method you also get an arbitrary degree. The question then arises, what is the value of the whole thing?

Are you here to get merely arbitrary things? Of course every one will say that such is not his purpose in coming, but it is in many cases. Institutions financed by other than student fees and philanthropy, are weighted down every year by that great number of students who are not keeping faith with the purposes of the University of Nebraska.

This is called an institution of higher learning. It is performing its purpose. It lives up to the standards that it sets. You who are not keeping pace with the University are leeches. Drop off.

Merely Opinion

K. U. is coming!

At the end of this week, thousands of persons will come to Lincoln to see the dedication of the stadium and the annual football classic between Nebraska and Kansas. It will be Homecoming day. This is the annual day for all alumni to return to see their football team in action.

Today is the last opportunity for students to make changes in the student directory.

K. U. is coming. Every year Nebraska beats K. U., but the Jayhawkers would give their history to defeat the Huskers. The Kansans are fighters. They were defeated last year when Nebraska was invited to the dedication of their stadium. Retaliation would be sweet.

The Daily Nebraskan will publish a special stadium dedication number Saturday morning. Reporters will see the managing editor for assignments. Everyone connected with the paper will be needed to work. Report early this week.

K. U. is coming!

Nebraska students gave Oklahoma very cordial treatment. K. U. and the Huskers have long been friends. Plan to make an extra effort to entertain Kansas.

Bent: Yes, but don't try to cash it.

Irate Ancestor: Young man, what were you doing with my daughter?
Young Man: Well, she don't dance, she can't sing, and she has a terrible line. Now use your own judgment.

We suggest, in speaking of male and female students to call them Co-Eds and Co-Ednas.

Why go to Europe to see architectural beauties? It has been said that every piece of furniture in U-hall is hand carved—and as for antiques! 'Nuff sed!

Why doesn't some enterprising young fellow send out a field glass to the Look Out Committee on S. S. steps. This would relieve much eye-strain in the Co-ed review.

The reason there is so much hypocrisy today is the cheering one that at last it has become good form to think of others as Jesus did. This requires the installation of a high-power rectifier between many men's hearts and mouths.

Matrimony is more than a mere matter of money.

The way to amass eternal life is by accumulation and investment. If we do not let time slip through our fingers, but put it at interest as fast as we receive it, it will compound unto eternal life.
