HUSKERS MEET TIGERS.
Nebraska leaves this week to meet the Missouri eleven on the Columbia gridiron. The Cornhuskers will not appear again in the stadium until they meet the fast travelling Notre Dame squad.

Missouri has not been hitting a very fast pace this season, but the Tigers have given Nebraska some hard battles in the history of the two institutions and there is plenty of cause to watch Missouri when the Huskers meet their squad Saturday.

"THREE WISE FOOLS."
The University Players will give four performances of the "Three Wise Fools" this week. It has often been said, and the ticket sales show the assertions to be true, that the Players are not receiving the support from students that they do from the persons who live in the city of Lincoln.

It is regrettably true that the spoken drama is decaying. It may have reached a point now where it will go to a no lower ebb, or even where it may rise when theater-goers tire of their present form of amusement. Students, representing the men and women who will lead the nation, are the ones who will decide whether the drama shall live or die. Certainly its expression and intimate contact with all persons will cause a favorable vote when the time comes to decide the fate of the stage.

PAY YOUR PLEDGE.
Now that the stadium has been dedicated, that the greater share of the work has been done, and that there is a great debt to pay on the structure, this is the time to pay your second pledge. The stadium was constructed almost entirely by alumni and students and it must be those same persons who are to pay the money that they have promised. There are huge obligations for the committee to meet. Your pledge will help pay them.

The student directory will be out soon. Next to looking through the Cornhusker in the spring, there seems to be no greater satisfaction than looking through the directory even though it is but a list of names.

The alumni have returned home. What was their impression of the institution that they left five, ten or fifteen years ago? Students here can but feel that it was favorable. The new stadium, the football team, the high tone of the spirit, and the increased enrollment certainly spoke strongly for those who have followed in the ranks of the visitors.

SINCERITY.
There is no more admirable trait of character than that quality known as sincerity. It is a silent, invisible attribute, but it betrays itself in the attitude in which tasks are attacked. Sincerity does not necessarily imply perfection, or even excellence, but it is allied with a desire for truth and it is the grain that distinguishes that which is ethical from the unethical. It implies honesty of purpose—frank, conscientious and undissembling. It is not to be assumed; it is inspired. It is not given to exploitation by its possessor, for it is a state of mind, not a material possession. As evidenced in the attitude of mind, it manifests itself in the desire to accept responsibility gravely and to discharge it dutifully and well. Sincerity's creed is contained in the words of Aristotle: "All actions directed by choice aim at some good." H. I. P.

Campus Opinion
Some students while celebrating the rally Friday evening undoubtedly permitted their zeal to overcome their judgment, or in an endeavor to play a prank did not take into account that the expansion of the extension work has brought to the evening classes people not otherwise connected with the school.

The writer's wife took the family car to the Social Science building during a class Friday evening, and upon returning to go home found the air taken out of all four tires and one tire tampered with. This made it necessary for her to secure aid.

The writer asks the Daily Nebraskan to publish this comment as a reminder not only to the students who were involved in this affair, but all students, that they owe a duty to the University not to resort to interference with property and thereby casting a reflection upon their school.

RAG CARPET Conducted by Carolyn Atry

The modern Amazons have once more come into their own. Now it is rifling that has attracted the fair ones, and who knows but what some of these days, the buildings on this campus may be rocked to their very foundations when the women all start shooting at once. If the rifles are anything like they are, they'll all be "repeaters."

She: Father says you have more money than brains.
He: Shows how much he knows. I'm broke.
She: Yes, father added that you were.

The girl "with a line" generally has a hook on one end and some poor fish generally swallows it.

A boy we like and muchly admire is Josephus Hezekial Peat. He doesn't slam the door on our face as we stand in the Temple line to eat.

We may be only a Ragrug but that's a darn sight better than being a crazy quilt. Yes, we print our own stuff.

He was wild about it. He couldn't do without it. It was vital to him. He said that if he lost it. He'd never be the same. And we'd like to tell you what it was. But, gosh—it doesn't rhyme with same.

The Rag Doll says that she was out riding late last Saturday night and she noticed that a lot of cars seemed to be having engine trouble.

We heard an authority remark the other day that the "stiffs" in Bessey hall aren't the only "dead ones" on the campus.

A freshe remarked the other day that all that made dry lectures in S. S. bearable was deciphering the "handwriting on the wall."

The old grads come back to tell of old U hall when she stood alone, and cows lowed 'round her door. Couldn't we stake a few old bosses around on the Campus to make it seem more natural?

He—He may not be good looking, but he has money to burn.

She—Well, I never suffered with heat when I was out with him.

Prof.—I'm getting some rare work from the new freshmen.
Assistant—Rare?
Prof.—Yes, not well done.

Our definition of a dumbbell is that he is like a fraction with 0 for a numerator and size 14 for a denominator.

The world is so full of a number of things. No wonder we stumble against them in the dark.
