CRITICAL MOMENTS.

Nearing the eve of the greatest football game on the Husker schedule, Nebraska students are holding their spirit with a tension that promises to break loose the afternoon of this intercollegiate classic. A week of solid drill upon Nebraska traditions and Nebraska hopes has put every student and every rooster on a sharp corner preparation for the game that has been the topic since the Huskers decisively defeated Notre Dame last year.

Beginning with the rally Friday night, that indomitable spirit will assert itself as the expression of the fight to be held on the gridiron Saturday.

These are tense moments. This is the time when Nebraska spirit will have to prove itself. Bear in mind that Nebraska concedes nothing and that Nebraska has but one end, and that is to fight.

WILL YOU FAIL.

Freshmen, your pledges have not been made to the stadium. Will you, men and women who have chosen this University, fail to support the memorial to Nebraska's soldier dead and the center for all physical activities?

Could you have seen the classes respond to the request for more than a hundred thousand dollars last year, you would have reached your quota the day of the rally. You are not showing Nebraska spirit. You are not indicating that you are real Cornhuskers. Nebraska expects more of you.

Student Opinion.

Contributions to this column are very welcome and invited. Student opinion is valuable to the editorial staff of the paper, consequently we welcome it.

To the Editor:
I am a freshman co-ed. Like all other freshmen on the campus, I have been asked to subscribe to first one thing and then another. Sometimes we are asked for large sums, sometimes for smaller amounts, but we all realize that the total is quite a lot of money and we hate to part with it freely. When I bought my "Rag," season athletic ticket, paid my contribution to the Y. W. and such things I could see that I was getting direct returns for the sums invested. Then I was asked to pay my share on the new stadium. It seemed to me that I was paying to see the games, that girls never had many athletic facilities here, that an out-of-state student should not be expected to invest in a Nebraska stadium, well, in short, since my pocketbook is not bulging that I should not have to pay on the stadium.

Fellow students often asked my reasons for not paying and I had quite a line of such statements to tell them. I was sincere in my belief that I could refuse to pay and still have a clear conscience. I argued that I would return to my home state and not be concerned whether the Nebraska stadium had any of my assistance or not. I answered the "true spirit" question by saying that I had given to various things until I could not afford to give any more. I plead that I was enthusiastic and upheld Nebraska customs. I wear my green button, enter into activities to some extent and do all such possible things to show spirit.

That was the way I felt about the stadium question until I happened to attend a meeting of the students who are trying to obtain the pledges. I did not belong there, strictly speaking, as I had accompanied a friend. I listened to the arguments which were put forth for the pledges. In the back of my mind my arguments still held good. Then an older man addressed the group. Probably there was nothing startlingly new in his discussion but I soon heard the stadium question answered as I had never heard it before. Of course,

I must admit that my mind was not absolutely closed to conviction in the first place. I had been saying that I was going to have the matter explained to my satisfaction before I would even consider the pledge, but up to this time no one had made those explanations satisfactorily.

Now there was something in the atmosphere of that talk that supplied the spirit that I had been missing. I had been claiming to have spirit! I hadn't known what spirit was. Knowing some of the facts that are connected with the stadium, its erection, its debt, its future, its dedication, and its place in the state and university, I could never refuse to pledge my bit and still have a clear conscience.

Perhaps it is not the fault of the solicitor, yet I did not sign up for one of them before hearing the discussion at their meeting. Are they carrying that message to the freshmen as it was presented to them? I know that we are not all orators, but couldn't we put the stadium situation in its proper light? The freshmen are continually told that they are privileged in being able to pay on the stadium. You know that we look a bit askance at anything which is called a privilege if it takes our money. We are bound to wonder if there isn't some catch and we may not be puzzled when we question about it.

Far be it from a mere freshman to try to present selling methods to the students at the University of Nebraska. They are very, very successful as it is. Sometimes I have felt that they have been too successful with me, but I shall never regret the bit of self-sacrifice it may cost me to have signed the stadium pledge. I should like to ask all of the freshmen to buy their unit and share with me the spirit it will give them when they go to the game Saturday and watch their team defeat the Irish in the stadium that belongs to them.

A FRESHMAN GIRL.

To the Editor:
A stadium pledge solicitor wishes to inform all freshmen, who feel as one man feels, that Nebraska is not the place for the man who would rather drive a car here than sacrifice that luxury for any cause his school is advancing. In soliciting, Wednesday night, such a man was found. His only excuse for not doing his bit for the stadium was that he was afraid that if he did he would be unable to keep a car here next semester.

Is that Nebraska spirit? It is not! Nebraska spirit is the spirit that will do anything for Nebraska. It is the spirit that puts school first and self last—that will give up a car to pledge to the stadium. Nebraska has no room for the student who puts self first and school last. I do not think there are many of that type of freshmen here. I sincerely hope not, for that kind of man is a detriment to any institution, to any community, and to the world in general. Freshmen, show real Nebraska spirit! Go over the top in the drive for our school and our stadium.

Kline is the inventor of the five man defense which is now generally regarded as the best type of play. He first tried out the defense in 1914 when he brought his Wesleyan team to the Armory for a game with Nebraska. That was the first time the five man defense was ever played and it has since been adopted by nearly all of the big teams of the country.

Sioux City, Iowa,
Thursday Night

Dear Al:

I want to thank you for your letter and you may count on my being in Lincoln Friday. As you say we can hear the Serenadors with Clyde Davis back on the violin Friday night and then watch the Cornhuskers settle the "Irish" question Saturday. And Al, do you know Gerin's Music Masters are going to play at the Lindell on Saturday night, they're from Sioux City you know, and really dear their music is irresistible. As you say there will be plenty of room too, because of the new radio which broadcasts the music into the old dining room which has been remodeled into a real party house itself. Well Al, it's the "Serenadors" Friday night and the Music Masters Saturday night, so I'll be counting the minutes until the music starts.

Sincerely yours, MABEL.
