WELCOME SYRACUSE.

The Syracuse team is scheduled to arrive in Lincoln today. The men have been travelling since Tuesday and they are a long way from home. To show that you are real Cornhuskers, welcome the team and treat the men as your guests. Show them that the Nebraska type of spirit is an honorable type.

"Let them go back to New York state filled with the conviction that win or lose, the men and women of Nebraska under all conditions are thoroughly qualified to act in every sense the host."

FIGHT NEBRASKA, FIGHT.

Syracuse, stinging under the Colgate defeat, striving for a chance to strike at Nebraska, and coming west to defend the honor of the East, will be in Lincoln today. The Orangemen are here to beat Nebraska.

There are but a few hours between now and the kickoff. Nebraska's team is working desperately to get into shape. What are the students doing?

Break loose today with your wealth of spirit. Assume that tension that characterized the week before the Notre Dame game. Be fighters and above all, concede nothing.

Syracuse is coming west to beat Nebraska—to beat Nebraska. Isn't that a challenge for students to take? It is time for every student to act.

Let that famous Nebraska spirit grow.

Notre Dame says that if the game had lasted a few moments longer, the Irish would have won. And now, Ames thinks the same thing. It is idle patter to reckon into the chambers of unpassed time.

It costs Dartmouth students an average of $1,342 to go to school one year. If it costs Nebraskans that much, some one is spending more than his allowance.

WHY WONDER?

A man interested in the strange and foreign art of weaving the old rag carpet steps to the fore and wonders if his grandmother was correct. He wonders—even ponders—on the conventionality called dress. He reviews and even threatens to criticize—but of what avail?

Foolish men, foolish women, and foolish world. Everything is mere conventionality. People are cynical, satirical, and simple, but they all follow the whim of fashion. They are servants. Their leader is merely some person who has succeeded in converging the dangling thoughts of the mob into arbitrary channels. And that is fashion.

Men who worry over women's fashions will ever be maniacs—for they will always have something to worry about. Unfairness of life, unfairness of dress, and unfairness of fashion will always cause a share of wondering and worried writers to compose their thoughts on the why and wherefore. They shall always propose their questions and they shall always get their foolish answers.

NOW IS THE TIME.

The sifting, culling, and discarding of students has begun. The file of unfortunates is forming and the wheels have begun to turn. Students who have not met the scholastic requirements of this institution must either present a very logical excuse or sever their connections with the University of Nebraska.

At colleges where no entrance examination is given, it is necessary to provide for some kind of a scholastic elimination. This method is used.

Students who leave at this time of the year are not good students. Probably the greater number did not have sincere motives when they came to Nebraska. It is fortunate that they are forced to leave. Others who have had misfortunes are usually given an opportunity to try again.

Opinion

To the Editor of the Nebraskan:

I am writing to express my appreciation of your editorial in the Daily Nebraskan of November 21. It is in regard to the use of profanity in yells and songs. The reasons you give for eliminating profanity from the organized cheering at football games are sufficient, but there is an additional reason which is also important. The University of Nebraska sets the pace for the high schools of the state. As goes the University, so go the high schools, and the grades follow closely upon their heels. As a matter of example, the University should eliminate the profanity. With her wonderfully beautiful chant, and the yells and songs which are above reproach, Nebraska does not need to stoop to the common and vulgar.

You also had a fine editorial in last Sunday's paper under the caption, "Do it for Nebraska."

Today's paper (November 21) has several articles and contributions which express the real spirit of Nebraska. The account of the action of the Student Council, in regard to the use of profanity, is one of them, and the article by Coach Dawson is another. In that article Mr Dawson expresses the desire that the visiting team should be treated with courtesy and respect. "Let them go back to New York state filled with the conviction that win or lose, the men and women of Nebraska under all conditions are thoroughly qualified to act in every sense the host." That's fine. I am convinced that your editorial, the action of the Student Council, and the article by Mr. Dawson give expression to the real Nebraska spirit; and that words and deeds, by individuals or groups, which do not conform to these expressions are sporadic and thoughtless. The real spirit of Nebraska is that fine spirit which calls for the best in speech and the noblest in action. Sincerely yours,
HARRY F. HUNTINGTON.

Dear Weaver of the Rag Carpet:

From whence cometh rag carpets? My grandmother tells me that they are made from worn out dresses, frocks, skirts and et cetera. Like most editors or 'esses, you probably search the rag bag daily for some new material from which to make a new carpet.

Why not take a dress—modern dress, we note the recent editorial on the dress of the campus.

Opinion has it around the campus that women dress to please men. If this be true, many women certainly make a mess of their attempts. Men are simple creatures, after all, and most of us do not know an exquisite gown from a cheap one. There is but one thing which catches our eyes—femininity in dress. We like colors and dainty effects which are entirely foreign to our own somber apparel. How many times we see some brainless, little doll dressed in ribbons and feminine fol-de-rol holding the attention of every man at the dance. Her gown is one that would be censured by the discriminating eyes of her sex, but man sees only its color and feminine attractiveness. Our heart strings are made of lace and the girl who holds them in her dainty hands shuns everything masculine in her attire and plays up to her womanly instincts.

It isn't often that the girl in manish attire is sought after by the male sex, yet so many girls go even so far as to wear stiff collars and
