CRITICAL MOMENTS.

The Kansas Aggies are coming to Nebraska Thursday to take home a victory over the Huskers. For a year they have drilled daily upon the gospel of a Cornhusker defeat. They will be desperate when they get here. They will be out to defeat, to crush, and to down the greatest team in the midwest.

The invaders can beat Nebraska, but before they do it they will have that Cornhusker fight, that Nebraska spirit, and that student morale to defeat and crush. It is strong if it is so willed.

This is an important game. It may decide the championship of the Valley—and that is important to Nebraska.

Cornhuskers, there are but a few days left before the football team closes the season. These last days should and must be the greatest days of the season. Make them so.

MAKE A SCHOLAR OF HIM

Professors in every university usually have the occasion to receive letters or calls from fathers who want to know why their sons were flunked in courses or why they were not getting the work as they should. A professor in an American university wrote a lengthy reply to such a father, excerpts of which follow:

"Has your son ever heard you express a broadly rational conception, ever joined with you in any fine sport of the mind? Have you brought him up on noble legends, read Shakespeare to him before bedtime? When he awoke, did his eyes rest on beautiful pictures? Did you ever take him to an orchestral concert or to a really good play? Your son's face and actions and speech have already answered these questions for me. You have stuffed his mind with dull platitudes, have done everything you could to convince him of the impiety of original thought. You have crammed his soul with ugly chromos, jazz, movies, yellow journals, and sensational magazines. You have addressed your son every day, for eighteen years, in ungrammatical, ill-chosen, and fumbling words. Yet you do not blush to toss him to me with a 'Here! Make a scholar of him.'"

"I conclude that you have cast your son for a role which he cannot play because you are the victim of certain widely prevalent delusions. You believe that every American boy should go to college, whereas only a few American boys should go to college. You believe that education can remove fundamental defects of heredity and the results of adverse home environment, whereas it stands powerless in the face of such obstacles. You believe that liberal studies are intended to increase earning power, whereas they are intended to illuminate the mind and spirit. You believe the 'college life' has great educative value, whereas most of the activities included in this term are forms of play under pompous and wasteful disguises."

ATTEND THE RALLY

For the last time this season Husker students are asked to attend a football rally. It will be held in the Armory Wednesday night.

This is the last time that several of the Cornhusker football players will appear at a rally. It is the last time that Captain Lewellen will speak to the student body as captain of the football team.

This last rally must show Cornhusker spirit at its highest pitch. It must typify Nebraska as the institution of loyal students.

Cornhuskers, the rally Wednesday night is a farewell rally. You will be there.

A LAST EDITORIAL.

With the next issue of the Daily Nebraskan, the new staff will take charge of the paper. The publication board made the ruling last spring that the editorial staff should be changed every quarter, the ruling going into effect for the first time yesterday.

The editor in charge of the paper the first half of this semester wishes in this, his last editorial in this capacity, to thank the students for the fine support given the paper upon every occasion; to thank the faculty for the interest shown in the student publication; and to express his appreciation of the aid that organizations gave in helping to publish a greater Daily Nebraskan.

With the aid of slightly more than twenty students, the paper has been published five times a week since the middle of September. In that time, it has enjoyed generous contributions of news, it has been able to choose its reporters with care, and it has been able to develop into a better Daily Nebraskan by such merit.

A FAILURE.

"I couldn't make the grade." Men and women going home from the University—dishonorably dismissed for failure to exert effort enough to meet the requirements—are uttering such words. But those same persons are adding a slight alibi. They are offering excuses.

Their parents must greet them with a smile; must sympathize with them in their failure; but back of the smile there is that word "failure," failure in the greatest days of life.

It is unfortunate to be dismissed from the University now; to be sent home; to be asked to sever connections with this noble institution. He, who has left through failure to meet the requirements, is certainly not a man of courage and energy.

Big business needs big men

There is room and need for capable men in all the allied activities of big business. But nowhere is there greater need or greater opportunity than in that very essential service to all business—Insurance (Fire, Marine and Casualty).

Insurance, as a profession, affords contact with the most vital activities of the commercial and industrial world.

The Insurance Company of North America, the oldest American Fire and Marine Insurance Company, has been an integral part of big business since 1792 and the earliest beginning of national affairs. Out of this long experience it urges those who are about to choose a calling to consider the world-wide influence of the insurance field.
