THE MILITARY BALL.

Cadet officers have asked, through the student opinion column in the Daily Nebraskan, why permission can't be given to allow the military ball to continue for an hour or more after the regular closing hour for University dances, 11:30. These officers, who have put in weeks of work getting ready for this social event, want to know why special permission cannot be given to allow the ball to question, it becomes apparent at once go beyond the usual closing hour.

In considering the merits of this that there are two sides to the question, both of which have strong supporting arguments.

Students complain, and rightfully so, that two hours, from 9:30 to 11:30, are not enough for such an event, and that therefore it should be continued until 12:30 or later to enable those attending to get the full enjoyment from the affair. Those upholding the other side in this difficulty, however, maintain that the ball should begin earlier, and thus give more time for the annual ball.

Those in favor of the extension of time for the ball also contend that one exception to the University ruling in this matter would not interfere with the discipline regarding University regulations. It is argued, however, that if one exception is made, others will demand the privilege and there is no place to draw the line.

The foregoing are only a few of the arguments pro and con concerning the question of the closing hour for the ball. The final solution of this difficulty will be eagerly awaited by students.

AN ALARMING TENDENCY.

Modern educators are noting with alarm the tendency of the youth of today to go to the extreme in everything that he does, especially in the matter of personal conduct. It seems that the younger generation is not satisfied with the approved standards in things pertaining to its manner of living, but wants to go a little farther, to venture into new fields, to disregard the traditional rules of conduct.

While this tendency to venture into the unknown, to try that which has not been tried before, is laudable in the fields of science, literature, etc., the young generation is making a serious mistake when it introduces this idea in fields of personal conduct.

Standards of conduct have been built up by experience through the ages, and every field has been explored. The younger generation may feel satisfied that those rules of conduct that they are urged to follow are those which will ultimately bring them the most pleasure and satisfaction.

SYSTEMATIZE YOUR WORK.

Everyone would accomplish more and make his work have greater worth if he devised a system which he could devotedly follow. Before starting on any task plan your procedure. One should have a regular study program and never allow it to be thwarted. Your work will seem much easier and you will not be a student who is a little behind time. Work while you work, and work regularly.

One loses much time from the lack of concentration. You could do your tasks in half the time if you gave them undivided attention. When you are given this opportunity for an education why not make it worth while?

What did the judge say about your speeding?
Fine.

The Rag Doll says that we may have hard lines, but think what a down-trodden thing this poor old world is.

Dear Mother:
I am pleased to report that I got two incomparables and two Dandies on my mid-semester report. The dean even called me to his office to congratulate me.

Do your Christmas charging early.

The military ball will probably close early.

LE ROSSIGNOL'S LATEST TEXT BOOK PUBLISHED

"Economics for Everyman" Is Introduction to Field of Social Economics.

"Economics for Every Man," the latest work of Dean J. E. LeRossignol of the College of Business Administration, has just been published by Henry Holt & Company.

The book is an introduction to social economics, intended for the general reader as well as the student.

"The book," Mr. LeRossignol states in the preface, "is not merely a static photograph or cross-section of economic conditions as they are today, but a sort of moving picture of a living and growing organization."

The text is now being used in several classes of the College of Business Administration.

MICHIGAN: Eddie Tryon, halfback of Colgate University football team, leads all men in making touchdowns, besides holding the individual record for the season in making touchdowns in one game. He made seven touchdowns in the game with Niagara. Besides being a crack halfback, Tryon is a shot-putter, broad jumper, and sprinter of no mean ability.

OKLAHOMA: The University orchestra, composed of 50 students and faculty members, will give concerts every Sunday afternoon. The concerts are open to all students and no admission will be charged. In addition to the selections by the orchestra, a vocal soloist will sing a group of numbers:

plication agriculture has progressed further in the last 70 years than it had ever done before, even though all new devices and methods met with ridicule at first. The end of such development is not yet in sight, for even now the problem of seeding by airplane is being taken up."

Professor Sjogren named the following openings for the man who takes up this field of work, farm equipment manufacturing, material manufacturing, education, mortgage and loans, rural contracting, and mail order business. He said that the opportunity is great in any of these fields because very little has been done that is actually practical for the farmer because so much of his work has been done by men who did not know the problems of the farmer.
