THE CULTIVATION OF TASTE.

Despite all that has been said about censorship there will probably be poor books, poor drama, and poor moving pictures as long as there are people who are winning to pay to read and see them. The cultivation of good taste among the reading and the play-going public will do more to eliminate foolish and objectional plays and books than any amount of legislation could do.

A university may play an important part in the cultivation of this taste. It may give to its students such standards of judgment that they will not be able to discriminate that which is poor and artificial from that which is excellent and genuine. A school which gives its students an opportunity to become acquainted with literature and with drama of the worth while type, is doing much to raise the literary and the dramatic standards of the country.

WATCH YOUR WORDS

A prominent writer once said: "If you want to know how a stranger gets your measure that is, so he can tell who you are and what you are, you have only to mind your manners and watch your speech. As your speech is so you are, for it is by the spoken word that one shows the degree of his culture or betrays the depth of his ignorance."

Since then, words are the conduit whereby we convey our thoughts, and their expression and due use is the basis on which we are judged, each one of these words that we utter should be given a significance and an accent that will reflect the measure of the knowledge that we possess. If our words are taken as the representatives of the learning that is ours, how much of our reputation can they be made to make! Discordant words are accepted as an indication of indifferent knowledge and we are accepted at that value! "As our words are, so are we."

There are but few of us who are blessed with an eloquence of expression, but correctness and a certain polish in speech can and ought to be acquired by all. The simplest words can convey a beautiful thought if they are rightly used. Indeed, it is often in the simplicity of words that their beauty lies. It was Ruskin who said that the accent or turn of expression of a single sentence will at once mark a scholar.

Thirty-five thousand dollars worth of Cornhusker spirit is what Mr. Latenser and Mr. Davis, stadium architects, donated to the University. This sum is a conservative estimate of what would be charged by an architect for designing the stadium.

The Lincoln University Club will give a banquet tomorrow for Mr. Latenser and Mr. Davis, as an appreciation of their efforts. The Nebraskan likewise takes this opportunity of thanking these two men for the help they gave in making the proposed memorial stadium a reality. The work done by these two men is a concrete illustration of the Cornhusker spirit dominating all loyal Nebraskans.

Everything is in readiness for the traditional Cornhusker banquet tonight. The best of speakers will talk, movies of the Notre Dame game will be shown, and a real feed will be provided. All loyal Cornhuskers will gather at this banquet to pay a well-deserved tribute to the Husker grid team. Are you one of them?

Student Opinion.

Contributions to this column are very welcome and invited. Student opinion is valuable to the editorial staff of the paper, consequently we welcome it.

Dear Editor:
This letter is not written in a spirit of complaint but in one of inquiry. And the topic of discussion is this, "Isn't a student showing a breach of etiquette at a party when he or she takes the decorations home?"

I attended a formal party as a "rep" this last week-end and was surprised to say the least to see another "rep" help herself to seven roses from a floor basket. Not one but seven. The other guests followed her example and soon the hall was stripped of decorations.

At a house dance or even a fall party this would have been pardonable, but at a formal—No. It reminded me of my grade school days when I took home my paper napkins and a piece of candy from every party. Maybe these "social errors" that flock to every dance are not childish but merely trying to be sophisticated. Be that as it may—watch at the next party you attend and see who it is that leads in making away with the decorations. Then warn your book-agent friends that he is in the market for a book of etiquette. A CO-ED.
