A ONE-SIDED LIFE.

"The average college student can't carry on an intelligent conversation with a well-informed person on topics not related to college life."

It is a serious charge, to be sure. An examination of the situation shows it to be true of a surprisingly large number of college students. When brought into contact with outsiders without a direct interest in some phase of college life, college men and women find themselves at a disadvantage, and unable to converse on subjects of general interest.

College students have been accused of living in a narrow sphere of their own. They are wrapped up in college life in its various phases. And often a more serious case is found, where the student concentrates his efforts on one side of college life such as studies, activities, or social life.

This tendency toward a one-sided life among college students should be discouraged. One of the principal aims of a college education is to develop broad-mindedness and a many-sided interest in affairs.

College students should strive to extend their interests, to have a broader outlook. Students should have a knowledge of state, national, and world affairs. Keeping in touch with the outside world is not only desirable, but essential to the college student.

Within a short time each student will have to take a place in the world at large. It will be his purpose to conquer that world in his own particular field. How much easier it will be for him to gain success in the world if he goes into it in close touch with affairs. He will have to spend little or no time adapting and adjusting himself to the new environment. Thus his chances for success and happiness will be immeasurably increased.

By a 35 to 21 count, the Cornhusker cagesters rang up the second victory of the season last night. The Huskers played a fast, clean game, and deserve to win. Nebraska should give her unqualified support to the Husker quintet, and Coach Kline's men will make an enviable record. Cornhusker fans have long been watching for such a cage team as Kline has developed.

This team will keep winning games as long as the student body is backing it. Fight behind the cage team—go to every game, boost for the team, and even the super-achievement of a 1924 Cornhusker Valley Cage Championship may be realized this year.

Although payments on pledges are sixty days past due, 800 students have failed to make the second payment on their stadium pledge. This is a serious situation. All possible means are being used by the committee to secure these payments. Students who fail to pay now will lose their credit at downtown stores of Lincoln.

The fact that the stadium is practically completed does not mean that money is not needed. Enormous amounts are due on the stadium, and large sums of interest are being paid. But overlooking the dire need of the money by the Memorial Association let us look at the situation from the standpoint of the student.

Is it good business to fail to pay bills promptly? Most assuredly not. The payment due on the stadium is a legal obligation, and the student should regard it as such.

Again, what brand of Cornhusker spirit are those students showing who fail to make their payments on the stadium? Is the failure to keep a

RAG CARPET

Perhaps we had these few cold days because the thermometer was under the weather.

Yesterday we got a letter from a funeral director reminding us that exams are in two weeks. We wonder what he meant.

He slept through class most all the term, His knowledge? In books he kept it Then crammed, his exam to grandly pass But from force of habit slept it.

THINGS TO WORRY OVER.

If we should all pass our exams and not even receive a con the professors would all die of surprise and we would have no University. So what will we do about it?

written promise to Nebraska Cornhusker spirit? The true Cornhusker spirit calls for immediate payment of those overdue pledges.

Sound business principles and regard for one's good standing demand immediate payment.

Preparations are being made by Coach Schulte for Nebraska's greatest track season—1924. For three years straight Valley champions on the track, the Huskers are going after the Valley title again this year. The loss of many veteran tracksters is offset by the improved track facilities in the stadium. There is also a squad of promising sophomores who will be fighting for places on the team.

Coach Schulte wants 500 men out for track. Every man in school who can is urged to report for track. And then, even the worst-looking "dub" often develops into a real track man, rewarded by an "N" letter—under Schulte's coaching system.

ILLINOIS: Warm winter weather

There's many a slip 'twixt the hip and the lip.

The Rag Doll says the beginning of exam week is the beginning of the end.

One—We have fifteen hens and I got eight eggs this morning.
T'other—Huh! We haven't any and I just got a dozen.

Do you read national advertisements?
No, but I wear 'em.

Considering the weather it shouldn't have been very difficult to put the Missouri game on ice last Saturday night.

Have you a family tree?
Nope, my paw was a woodchopper.

has cut the soft coal production of southern Illinois to 30 per cent of its capacity output. Many mines are closing, the biggest of which are the four mines of the Gem company of Chicago which was placed in bankruptcy in East St. Louis.

KANSAS—The bronze plate presented Kansas in honor of the dedication of the U. of N. stadium will occupy a prominent position among the Kansas trophies and gifts.

MICHIGAN: The creation of a School of Business Administration at this University was announced by the regents. The new department next fall will offer a five-year course, consisting of three years of supervised work in the literary college and two years of highly specialized study in the new school, the course ending with a degree of master of business administration.

MICHIGAN: A comprehensive investigation of engineering education in the United States is to be undertaken under the auspices of the Carnegie foundation and the National Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. W. C. Wickenden has been placed in charge of the work.

GEORGIA: At a convention of American football coaches it was stated that "Nations have succeeded in democratic government in almost exact proportion to their participation in competitive games and athletics. Today Great Britain and America lead the world in athletics as they point the way in democracy."

NEW YORK: Mrs. Molla B. Mallory, former national woman tennis champion, will not compete for her native country, Norway, if she is unable to represent America in the Olympic tennis events. Mrs. Mallory would be obliged to renounce American citizenship and this she does not intend to do.

IOWA: Iowa state college completed its 1924 football schedule by booking Nebraska Wesleyan university for the opening game of the season at Ames on September 24.
