CLASS COMMITTEES.

What have the class committees of the four classes done this semester to justify their existence? This is a question which may well be asked near the end of the semester, when a general accounting is made in studies and activities. What have these committees done to make the individuals composing them worthy of the honor which has been bestowed upon them. Let us look into this situation further, and try to discover what accomplishments have been recorded.

What have the men's and women's athletic committees of the various classes accomplished? What have the finance committees done? What have the various social and dance committees done for their respective classes? The grand total of the achievements of these groups can be summed up in one word. Nothing.

This state of inactivity, however, is not a characteristic being shown by class committees for the first time this year. This same lack of accomplishment has been a feature of the institution of class committee for a number of years. Appointments on these committees have been eagerly sought by those with political ambitions in the University, and selection for these class organizations has been considered quite a feather in one's hat.

Several class committees, such as the debate and olympic committees, do accomplish something. But the vast majority of these committees, which range from six to thirteen per class, do nothing. Then why do they continue to exist? Largely just because they have become established in past years.

Unless some valid excuse for the continued existence of such committees be found and work is given them to do, the doing away with this class is to be recommended.

The over-crowded condition of the campus walk on the south side of the Armory between classes is a source of unnecessary inconvenience and bother to students and faculty of the University. This walk, which is perhaps the most used way on the grounds, is entirely too narrow for the large number of students who go hourly to and from U hall and the Social Science building. This walk needs to be considerably widened. Perhaps the improvement of this walk seems like a small matter, but the necessity for quick remedying this over-crowded condition remains nevertheless.

New courses offered at Yale this year include "The Growth of Self," "Human Learning," and "Human Differences." These courses take up the study of considering just what a human being is. Human nature is the greatest study which can be undertaken by any student. The study of considering just what a human being is. Human nature is the greatest study which can be undertaken by any student. The study of human nature is one which is going on all the time. Every college student is more or less consciously studying the human nature of those about him.

A more conscious and devoted study of human nature and all its little strengths and weaknesses is to be recommended to the student. In a large sense, success in the world depends on just how well an individual understands human nature, which is the same everywhere, in and out of college.

against the Kansas Aggies tonight in the Armory. With two victories already won, the Huskers are going after another victory. A hard-fought contest is promised, and a large crowd of Husker supporters should be on hand for the game.

If the Nebraska student body stand united behind the Cornhusker cage team while it plays its home games, the Scarlet cagers will play winning basketball when they go on the trips. It is much harder to win cage contests on a foreign floor than on the home court. If the Husker quintet realizes from the support given them at the home games that the school is behind them, they will play harder and win more games on the trips than they would if student support were lacking.

Cadet officers who attended the Creighton military ball at Omaha report that at the Omaha school dance everyone traded every dance except the first and last dances. Nebraska is apparently alone in her custom of two persons spending an entire evening dancing with on partner. Much of the friendship, congeniality, and get-acquainted spirit which should characterize a dance is lost by the observance of this foolish custom. The plan of trading dances should be encouraged at all University dances.

Student Opinion.

Contributions to this column are very welcome and invited. Student opinion is valuable to the editorial staff of the paper, consequently we welcome it.

Dear Editor:
In the Sunday issue of the "Daily Nebraskan" appeared an editorial on the choice of studies. In it deprecating mention is made of the student who selects "pipe" courses. By doing this, the writer points out, he not only hurts himself, but cheats the state and its citizens who are paying for his stay in the University. These are strong words, dear editor, and I feel that a defence of the "pipe" seeker should be made.

We who are students in the University have been called in an earlier age which read classics, "Promethei". We have the foresight to perceive that the degree of our future success depends entirely upon our holding an A. B. or a B. Sc. And we intend to fight on to our diplomas if it takes us ten semesters, or all summer. Now how are we to do this?

Time was when those who went down to the University to school were expected to have some promising bud of intelligence, but in those days the Universities had few students. Now that the demand for degree-holders far exceeds the supply of the potentially intelligent, knowing professors expect nothing in their students and find it.

It is the "brilliant minds among the faculty" whom the editorial writer extols, who have conceived the necessity for "pipe" courses. They offer them we may be able to trudge our weary ways to the necessary A. B.'s.

The immutable law of the Board of Regents reads:—"Any candidate for the A. B. or B. Sc. degree must be able to show 125 credit hours upon his record in the registrar's office. So the only way the "brilliant" minds could get us through to our diplomas was to offer the "pipe" courses, for all courses look alike on the registrar's books.

Do you not agree with me, dear editor, that the words used against the "pipe" seeker were harsh? In offering us "pipe" courses our professors have a quite democratic end in view,—(do not take my word for it, ask them!) they make it possible for all of us to obtain what once required intelligence. Why shouldn't we choose "pipe" courses? That's what they're offered for, isn't it?

SATURDAY LAST DAY TO SIGN UP FOR MEET

No Additional Fraternities Have Registered For Shoot Monday.

Registration for the interfraternity rifle meet must be completed by noon tomorrow. No additional fraternities had signed up at five o'clock yesterday. The number of houses entered in the tourney is now fourteen, and the prospects are that several more will sign up today and tomorrow.

The fraternity men were unable to practice in the gallery yesterday because the gallery is reserved for the girl's rifle team on Tuesday and Thursday. Fraternity shooters have today and tomorrow morning for the finishing touches before the official shooting starts next Monday. It will save the team members much time if they will pick out a rifle this week and get the proper elevation and windage setting recorded before the meet starts. Only two sighting shots are allowed on the official targets and it is easier to adjust the rifle if the shooter has had previous practice with it.

Phi Tau Epsilon, winners of last year, are spreading bear dope promiscuously, but their practice shots in the gallery indicate that they are out again to win the first place this year, and the other frats will have to make good scores to nose them out.
