CHARTER DAY.

A week from today, February 15, 1500 former students in twenty-three alumni clubs will observe Charter day of the University of Nebraska. They will have recalled to them the fact that fifty-five years ago a bill was passed by the state legislature providing for the establishment of an institution, the object of which "shall be to afford to the inhabitants of the state the means of acquiring a thorough knowledge of the various branches of literature, science, and art." They will mention the name of E. E. Cunningham who introduced the bill, and of David Butler, the governor who signed it.

The first graduating class of our school will be talked about, and perhaps its two members, Judge J. S. Dales, whose office is in the Administration building, and Judge William Z. Snell of Tacoma, Wash., will appear as Charter day speakers. Probably they will have their audiences some of the 841 members of the June class of 1923.

The alumni will talk about the time when Charter day was a school holiday on the campus, and they will tell about the medals they won in athletic events. Maybe they will comment upon the fact that many students on the campus now see Charter day come and go without ever thinking of it.

The absence of Charter day from the student calendar is the result of two factors. It was found that the University was not holding classes on the required number of days, and the students were coming to regard the event simply as a means of getting out of work and not as a day of significance.

Back of this indifference was perhaps the growing tendency of people of all classes to regard holidays as opportunities for relaxation rather than occasions for celebration.

Charter day is a tradition forgotten by the present generation but alive to alumni. It is the plan of the Alumni Association to strengthen the traditions hold upon old students by establishing the custom of having the alumni clubs meet annually on that day.

The clubs will teach future graduates that Nebraska spirit and tradition exist beyond the campus, and that one may still learn of Cornhusker bonds after student days are over.

So graduates will celebrate next Friday and undergraduates will wait until their time comes before starting this Cornhusker activity.

But in students and graduates and Nebraskans everywhere who are reminded that February 15 is Charter day, a sense of the tremendous growth of Nebraska university will be awakened. The vastness of the institution as compared to the original plan, the great increase in the registration over that first year by this fifty-fifth, the equipment, the faculty, everything hat goes to win and support a national reputation for the school—by these the progress of a college, a state, a nation is marked.

The Rag Doll says that the problem is not to make both ends meet, but to find the ends.

ACCORDING TO LOGIC.

When tickling may be defined as an intensely vivid complex of unsteady ill-localized and ill-analyzed sensation with attention distributed over the immediate sensory contents and the concomitant sensations reflexly aroused—why should we worry about the high cost of living.

"Do you believe in spiritualism?"
"Well, I occasionally believe in raisin some."

Famous Blends

Remember a Manhattan?

Remember its soothing smoothness? That's gone but Oh Henry's equal is smooth. It's the proper blending of rich butter cream, caramel, crisp nuts and milk chocolate that has made Oh Henry famous.

Oh Henry!

"Oooh!"
"S'matter?"
"This pie tastes funny."
"Well, that ought to tickle you."

Many a fountain pen has prayed to be an eighteenth amendment.

We wonder sometimes if there will be anything but absence reports when the roll is called up yonder.

(About this time of year) "I hear that your son is coming home from college on account of illness."
"Yes, he said he had so much trouble with the curriculum."
